Problem Called Biggest Now Separating the Two Nations.

Throng Gives Vent To Frenzied 'Heils'

Rich Land's Return to Reich Is Inevitable, Says Fuehrer.

Ehrenbreitstein, Germany, Aug. 26 (AP).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, in an emotional address to a throng officially estimated at 300,000, today asked the world and especially France to be prepared for the return of the Saar to Germany when that rich region votes on the question next January.

"The Saar is the greatest problem now separating France from us," Hitler said.

"We shall not give up the conviction that the other side eventually will view this problem as it really is, and that France will not deny her assistance in solving it.

"There is no reason whatever why two great nations should remain forever hostile on this issue."

Greeting Is Frenzied.

The Chancellor was greeted with frenzied "heils" when he arrived from Cologne, where he had attended the inauguration of the huge Saar Exposition. The throng, apparently almost to a man, seemed intensely Nazi in its sympathies.

Hitler spoke from the topmost bastion of this historic Rhine fortress, from which the Stars and Stripes flew in the period of the post-war occupation.

The address was a strong appeal for understanding abroad, especially on the part of France, that the return of the Saar to the Reich January 13 was inevitable. Ties of blood and race, he said, bind the population indissolubly to the fatherland.

He Takes Full Credit.

Reviewing the past 18 months of the Nazi administration, the Fuehrer took full credit for the diminution in unemployment throughout Germany and the elimination of class antagonisms.

He scathingly ridiculed foreign allegations that Germany is not a happy nation and that trouble is brewing in the Reich.

"What pains us most," he said, "is the injustice and unfairness of others. Nothing is ever to be had

Max Schmeling Defeats Neusel

Neusel Fails to Answer Bell for Ninth Round in Hamburg Bout.

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 26 (AP).—Max Schmeling, Black Uhlan of the Rhine, began his climb back toward the world's heavyweight championship today by stopping blond Walter Neusel after eight rounds of their 12-round bout fought before a crowd of more than 100,000 persons.

Battered to the point of exhaustion by his rival's savage body punching, Neusel failed to answer the bell for the ninth round and Schmeling was awarded the victory on a technical knockout.

The former world title holder's triumph, carrying with it the German heavyweight championship, precipitated Schmeling once more into the forefront of challengers for Max Baer's crown. Schmeling will sail for the United States next month and may figure prominently in negotiations aimed at the selection of a suitable opponent for Baer next summer.

Schmeling fought a heady campaign against his youthful opponent. He made Neusel do all the leading and then cracked the blond about the body as he came in, wide open. He opened a cut on Neusel's chin

Jobless Man Seeks Death From Wasps

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 26 (AP).—Ramon Perez, 34, an unemployed cigarmaker, sought death today by leaping nude into a swarm of wasps, authorities reported. His condition was regarded as serious by hospital attendants.

Firemen were summoned to rescue Perez and burned weds to drive off the wasps, his mother, Mrs. C. Perez, pulled him from danger. She was stung twice.

Queen Wilhelmina Slightly Improved

Aasaardsgrand, Norway, Aug. 26 (AP).—Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, who became ill while on a holiday in Norway, felt better today.

The Queen was able to leave her bed for a short time and she had dinner with members of her suite in the dining room of her hotel.

Mackmen Rally in 9th to Force Game Into Extra Inning.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

This heavy burden the Nats are toting through the pennant race was lightened somewhat yesterday when St. Louis lifted both ends of their double-header, 3-0, 9-5, and slipped into a tie for fifth place with the faded and forlorn champions.

The only thing close about it was Washington's narrow escape from a shut-out in the second game which it avoided by a five-run rally in the ninth inning. The Nats came pretty close to being held hitless, too, in the opener when Georgie Blaeholder set 'em down with two hits so widely separated you couldn't reach them by telegraph.

Jack Knott, of the old knothole Knotts, pitched himself a good game in the finale but eased up and almost blew up in the last inning. During the first eight stanzas, as in the first game, the Senators put on a nice wand drill, but it was not counted in the scoring.

Philadelphia, Aug. 26 (AP).—The league-leading Detroit Tigers were given a scare today by the Athletics, but managed to push across a run in the tenth inning that gave them a 7-to-6 victory over Connie Mack's men.

Going into the last of the ninth with a 6-to-4 lead, and Crowder heading for another triumph, the Tigers were handed a jolt as the Athletics rallied to tie the score and send the game into overtime.

Firpo Marberry rushed to the rescue of the faltering Crowder, stemmed the attack, and went on to get credit for the victory. After his mates had given him a run in the first half of the tenth, Marberry turned on the heat to fan Jimmy Foxx for the final put-out.

Wildness Hurts Dietrich.

Bill Dietrich, hurling for the Athletics, was constantly in trouble due to his tendency to issue bases on balls. He finally gave Cochrane a free ticket to first in the tenth, the eighth pass issued by the hurler,

Reich Faces Trade Chaos, Schacht Says

Minister Warns Foreign Countries to Revise Debt Attitude.

Leipzig, Germany, Aug. 26 (AP).—A vision of darkening economic clouds that will force Germany to take shelter behind even stricter trade regulations than those now in effect was presented by Hjalmar Schacht, minister of economics, at a press conference today at the opening of the Leipzig Mercantile Fair.

He sounded a warning to the world that the present attitude toward Germany's debts "would lead to chaos." "We are about to work out methods to bring our imports into harmony with our ability to pay," he asserted, and added that Germany would encourage the domestic production of raw materials.

Schacht's address was almost uniformly pessimistic when he referred to the "failure of other nations to cooperate in the settlement of the foreign debt problem." He also took a dark view of Germany's growing import surplus and the failure of the German allocation plan.

The economics minister, however, repudiated any idea of inflation or devaluation which he said had been suggested as remedies for the prevailing economic dislocation. Occasionally he sounded a note of optimism. He expressed confidence in the integrity of German merchants who wish to work with other peoples in peaceful and profitable trade, and he voiced the hope that Germany can develop "exchange and compensation business" with producers of raw materials that might lead to trade development.

Charges Foreign Threats.

"Considering our measures for self-help, foreign creditor nations found no other way than to pour over Germany repeatedly a flood of threats, as if by such a course one single, practical device for paying

$9,500,000 in Bonds May Aid Texas Relief

Austin, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP).—The Texas legislature, meeting Monday, will consider a proposal to issue $9,500,000 in State relief bonds to match grants from the Federal Government.

Texas already has sold $10,500,000 of an authorized total of $20,000,000 in State relief bonds and sale of the remainder would care for relief requirements until further provision can be made by the regional session of the legislature in January.

7 Seized Here As Girl's Cries Arouse Police

Escaped Lorton Convict, Others Held With Guns and Two Cars.

A woman who ran screaming into the street in the 1200 block of Talbert street southeast at 1 p. m., yesterday led to one of the largest round-ups made by Washington police in many months.

Neighbors telephone police, and two Eleventh Precinct patrolmen, Privates C. D. Adams and R. E. Davis, arriving in a scout car, arrested four men and three women, who were ordered held for investigation, and confiscated a varied array of firearms, ammunition, a kit of alleged burglars' tools and two cars.

Those arrested are: John Cicione, 25, of New York City; Henry Lee Berry, 24, allegedly an escaped military prisoner from Fort Meade, Md.; Clarence Back, 22, one of three convicts who escaped from Lorton Reformatory, Va., August 11; Alfred M. Ciuffreda, 29, of the Talbert street address; Myrtle E. Moy, 24; Marie F. Burke, 23, both of Baltimore, and Thelma Cash, 25, of the Talbert street address.

Man Draws Gun, Escapes.

Police said that the disturbance originated when Archie Lyles, a convict from the Lorton prison who escaped with Back, drew a gun in the apartment during a quarrel. One girl ran shrieking to the street. Lyles escaped before the arrival of the police, they said.

When Officers Adams and Davis arrived, Back was sitting in a car with Miss Moy and Miss Burke. Adams arrested the trio, and drove the car to the Eleventh Precinct station. Arriving there, the officer walked around behind it to open the door on the other side.

Back slammed the door of the car, Adams said, shot the gears into reverse, and attempted to back the machine over him, running the car up over the sidewalk. As this failed, he grabbed at his pocket for a .38-caliber pistol, which he dropped when covered by Private Adams' pistol.

Girl Endurance Fliers Spend Third Day in Air

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—The plane "One Star," bearing two young women from Texas seeking to better the women's refueling endurance flight record, droned along toward its third day in the air tonight.

The girls, Jean La Rene and Mary Owens, reported themselves feeling chipper and comfortable, despite their close quarters and the weary grind.

Alabama Wilderness Combed For 'Cure By Prayer' Victim

Fort Payne, Ala., Aug. 26 (AP).—State officials and citizens today joined officers in an intensive search for an 8-year-old boy held by members of a religious cult attempting to "cure by prayer" an infected leg which, physicians say, "very easily could cause death."

Circuit Judge A. E. Hawkins, Mayor Charles W. T. Sawyer and County Solicitor J. M. Presley headed a searching party that combed the peaks and coves of Lookout and Sand Mountains.

They are seeking to rescue Wallace Boyle Sharp, jr., abducted, Sheriff S. W. Pope, said, by his father and other members of a Holiness Church.

Probate Judge G. L. Malone, of Dekalb County, has issued a warrant for the arrest of the father, ordering him to bring the child before him to "determine if he needs medical attention," but the hills have swallowed the boy and the band of men who carried him off, crying, in an automobile. The abduction occurred, the sheriff said, while deputies were en route from his office to serve the warrant.

The child had been suffering from an infection following a bruise on the right leg for several days. The infection continued to get worse as members of the Holiness faith crowded around his bed praying and "talking in the unknown tongue under the spirit," said Dr. R. J. Guest, who had examined the boy.

Judge Hawkins, who saw the boy during his illness, said the leg was swollen about twice its normal size and that "the boy must be in awful pain."

He added that the father was liable to criminal prosecution and that the entire abduction group could be charged with manslaughter if the child died.

Two Killed As D. C. Car Is Wrecked

M. Abramson and Mrs. Bessie Tiplitzsky Are Fatally Hurt.

2 Others May Succumb to Injuries From N. J. Crash.

Two Washingtonians were killed and two critically injured early yesterday when an automobile in which they were en route to Atlantic City for the week-end crashed into another car and plunged 75 yards off the Harding highway near Woodstown, N. J.

The dead:

Morris Abramson, 4824 Eighth street northwest, cooperator of Abramson Bros., Inc., women's clothing store at 1931 Fourteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Bessie Teplitzky, 37, of 622 Princeton place northwest, sister of Morris Abramson and wife of Harry Teplitzky, president of the clothing firm.

Injured May Die.

The injured:

Mrs. Clara Abramson, 40, of 750 Princeton place northwest, wife of David Abramson, treasurer of the clothing company, fractured skull, condition critical.

James Goldstein, 22, of 5322 Illinois avenue, son of the late Piney Goldstein, who collapsed and died of a heart attack while testifying in a $15,000 damage suit last January, fractured skull, condition critical.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Misslin and their daughter, Marian, 9, of Camden, N. J., occupants of the other car, cuts and bruises, condition not serious.

The Washington party was a few miles east of Woodstown when, according to New Jersey State police, an automobile driven by Le Roy Purslog, 22, of Quinton, N. J., pulled out of a side road directly into their path. Sideswiping the front of the Purslog machine, the Washington car careened across the road, clipped off a telephone pole at its base, and rolled over several times in a field.

All of the occupants of the Washington car, a sedan, owned by Abramson, were catapulted through its top. Abramson and Mrs. Teplitzky were dead when the ambulance arrived. Their bodies were taken to a morgue in Woodstown. Goldstein and Mrs. Abramson were rushed to a hospital in Salem, N. J., where attendants yesterday held little hope for their lives.

Goldstein and Mrs. Abramson were unconscious and State troop-

Mob Menaces Kidnaper of 2

East Texas Couple Robbed; Bride Is Attacked and Lashed to Tree.

Tyler, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP).—Threatened mob violence caused officers today to rush from the jail here to an undisclosed city a prisoner accused of kidnaping Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Herring and criminally attacking Mrs. Herring, a bride of a few weeks. A crowd had gathered around the jail.

The suspect, who gave the name of J. D. Willis, former Louisiana convict, was captured today near Tyler and identified by his victims as the attacker.

Herring and his wife said they were parked at a cold drink stand last night when a man approached, threatened them with a gun and forced them to drive to a wooded area.

There he tied Herring to a tree. Mrs. Herring said he slapped her several times and attacked her. Willis then fled in the Herring automobile, after tying Mrs. Herring to a tree with wire. Herring tugged futility at his bonds as he heard his wife's cries.

When the suspect was arrested in Palestine today, officers reported they found the engagement ring, a quantity of money and other valuables in the stolen car. He denied attacking Mrs. Herring.

About 2 hours after the attack, Mrs. Herring freed herself and untied her husband.

Gun in Big Holdup Traced to Midwest

$427,000 Robbery Weapon Came From Wisconsin.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—The discovery of a second serial number today on the machine gun discarded by bandits who stole $427,000 from an armored truck in Brooklyn last week enabled police to trace it to a dealer in Wisconsin.

Authorities were close-mouthed about this latest clew in the sensational holdup, possibly indicating they attached even greater importance to it than to a scuttled speedboat raised from Jamaica Bay yesterday or to a Federal Reserve money bag found in Elizabeth, N. J.

Meanwhile word of the $52,000 in rewards posted by the United States Trucking Corporation for recovery of the loot and capture of the bandits spread through the underworld. Police hoped for much from this bait.

4,120,000 Jobs Hailed By New Deal

Richberg Report on Pay Raises and Hour Cuts Made to Roosevelt.

Sponsor Says Only Facts Are Used, But Dark Side Is Ignored.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

An increase of 4,120,000 in employment, a boost of 8.5 per cent in weekly wages, an average reduction of six hours in the work week for all industry, the saving of many small businesses from failure and a substantial increase in corporation profits and stabilization of larger industries was claimed for the first 15 months of the "New Deal" in a report to President Roosevelt made public yesterday.

The report, prepared under the direction of Donald R. Richberg, executive secretary of the Executive Council, constituted the first of a series which in the next few weeks will be made to the President and the public, in an accounting of the stewardship of "New Deal" agencies. This first report dealt solely with "relief of industrial unemployment, through private enterprise and through public works."

The report was described by its sponsors as intended to be purely factual and without interpretation. On the whole this is true, but it lacks objectivity. The material in the report obviously has been carefully selected to show the achievements of the "New Deal," without reference to its failures. The crediting of the NRA, for instance, with certain accomplishments, might also be disputed.

Political Intent Seen.

Although the purpose of these reports may be solely to summarize the objectives and accomplishments of the New Deal, as pointed out in this report, the series undoubtedly will become a political document to be used in the fall Congressional campaign. The first report is ideally suited for that purpose and it would not be surprising if Democratic candidates distributed it in large numbers.

In the introduction of the report Mr. Richberg stated to the President: "After making a partial report for the joint meeting of the Executive Council and National Emergency Council on August 21, the Executive Secretary, by direction, has undertaken to prepare this report, giving a brief, but fairly comprehensive, review of the operations of the Government primarily in the field of emergency measures to promote recovery and to provide relief from the effects of a long depression."

Objective Summarized.

Turning to the subject matter of the first report—"Relief of Industrial Unemployment"—Mr. Richberg pointed out that "the primary problem of recovery may be stated

56 Fascists Fined, 4 Held in N. J. Raid

Troopers Seize Weapons of "Star Shirts."

Hammonton, N. J., Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Sixty members o fthe "Star Shirts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey," described as a Fascist organization, were arrested today by State troopers who raided a meeting.

The arrests were made after the troopers said they found several lengths of lead pipe and two stillettos in a truck which brought some of the "Star Shirts" to the meeting. About 100 persons attended. Fifty-six of the members were fined $10 each and assessed $4 in court costs each on disorderly conduct charges.

Four others, including Philip Bocchinni, of Philadelphia, were held in $50 bail on charge of carrying concealed weapons. Bocchinni is commander of the "Pennsylvania department" of the organization.

Textile Tie-Up Sept. 4; Secret Order Affects 800,000 Over Nation

Gorman Says Walkout Will Terminate in Victory.

Strike Posters Under Padlocks

Labor Board Hopeful Peace Efforts Will Prevail.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Secret instructions for a general walkout in the cotton textile industry on September 4 have been sent to sectional chieftains by the National strike committee of the United Textile Workers.

The order, which will be announced officially this week, will affect nearly 500,000 cotton mill workers, union officials say. An additional 300,000, they add, may subsequently be ordered from the mills in the silk, rayon and woolen industries.

The date for the walkout, jealously guarded by the strike committee, headed by Francis J. Gorman, was set for September 4 to give the union time to complete details for the strike, the largest numerically to confront the Administration, with the exception of the general strike in San Francisco.

The strike committee was ordered by a recent convention to call the general strike "on or before September 1." The deadline falls on Saturday, when few mills are in operation. The following Monday, Labor Day, is a holiday and the strike strategists settled upon September 4 as the day upon which they hope to achieve complete stoppage of mill operations.

Strike Posters Ready.

Posters proclaiming the strike hour are under lock and key in the offices of regional leaders, to be released on receipt of formal announcement from strike headquarters here.

Bolstered by votes of confidence at regional meetings in Charlotte and Shelby, N. C.; Providence, R. I., and Worcester, Mass., the strike committee pressed ahead yesterday with plans for the walkout.

"I am fully convinced," Gorman told reporters, "that the strike not only will materialize, but will be successful." He declined, however, to say what date had been fixed for the strike, but in a letter to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, Gorman wrote:

"The general strike committee of the United Textile Workers having agreed upon a date for a Nation-wide stoppage of work in cotton textile mills and strike orders hav-

Federal Rule Kills Intiative, Bank Charges

Guaranty Trust Sees Basic Conception of Limited Powers Menaced.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Wider and more active intervention by the Federal Government in the field of private business has reached the point where it threatens the basic conception of limited governmental powers and private business initiative on which the country was founded and developed, the Guaranty Trust Co. states in its monthly review of business conditions.

"For many years," the survey states, "observant citizens have been uncomfortably aware of the fact that public expenditures, taxes and borrowings have been increasing much faster than population, wealth and income. But it has been only imperfectly realized that this increase in the cost of government is due in considerable measure to the extension of governmental activity along lines that bring public agen-

NRA Parleys On Tomorrow At Hyde Park

Hopkins and Johnson to See Roosevelt at Rural Retreat.

By Leon Durr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Slipping easily into his favorite role—that of country squire—President Roosevelt today replaced visions of the sun-scorched West by vistas of his own fat acres, banished the worries of office for quiet, small talk with members of his family, and, in general, settled down for a month of sober stock-taking of the New Deal.

From thousands of miles of travel over land and sea, he arrived this morning at the plain, yellow station of Hyde Park for one of those simple welcomes that always provokes the wonder of his traveling companions. His arrival occasioned no more excitement than the return of any of his "neighbors" from an incidental business trip to New York.

Only Mrs. Roosevelt, his son, Elliott, and a dozen or so others were on hand to greet him. No matter what paroxysms of joy his visits may arouse elsewhere about

Crazed Youth Rakes Staunton With Gunfire; Holds Off Police

Staunton, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Shouting "I'm John Dillinger," Odie Weaver, 19, crazed with whisky, barricaded himse in a second-story room of his home here and, raking the street with shotgun fire, held off six policemen for an hour today until he finally was overcome by clouds of tear gas fired into a downstairs room.

Ed Merritt, colored railroad freight worker, was wounded in the leg by Weaver's shots as he walked down the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway tracks near the house. Weaver fired several volleys at Merritt, the bullets spraying a passing passenger train. The youth pointed his shotgun out of the window and fired as fast as he could reload.

The house was demolished as Weaver threw aside his gun, picked up an ax and started breaking out the windows and cutting up the furniture. His mother and two half sisters fled to the home of a neighbor.

Pointing the gun at Lertie Hoover, Weaver commanded him to come to the house and receive a message before he killed himself.

Hoover went, but scampered for cover as Weaver's gun blazed away again. Overcome by the gas, Weaver was lying on a bed when Chief of Police W. P. Davis and Officers Moses and Thurber, and Clarence Stoople charged into the room.

Every available police officer in the city was sent to the scene. Lester F. Jones was fired at point blank when he rode up to the house in a motorcycle. He was unharmed.

Weaver was married several weeks ago, but his wife left him, his mother said.

2 Killings Start Missouri Hunt

Feeling Is Intense and Cotton Picker Sought in Overseers' Death.

Charleston, Mo., Aug. 26 (AP).—The killing of Jess and Dan Cofer, overseers on the Tynearson Plantation at Wolf Island, southeast of here, spurred a widespread search today for Mose Hurley, itinerant colored cotton picker.

Jess Cofer, 38, a nephew of Dan Cofer, 55, formerly was a deputy sheriff in Mississippi County.

Intense feeling was manifest among white residents in the plantation settlement as they took up the hunt for Hurley and his brother, at whose home the shooting took place. Hurley came here from Champaign, Ill., and police expressed belief he might attempt to cross the Mississippi River into Illinois.

Officers said the killings climaxed a quarrel between Hurley and the two white men, who were watching a dance at the home of Hurley's brother. Four colored men were held in jail as material witnesses for theh inquest, set for tomorrow.

Witnesses said they heard several shots and the white men fell. The two Negroes fled immediately.

Both the Cofer men are survived by families.

ing been sent to all local unions, subject to release, it seems advisable to report to you for your information in some detail the conditions obtaining in the cotton textile industry.

"Cotton textile workers are, in the main, in a worse position than they were before NRA, except that they now have some prospect for finally remedying their condition under the protection of Section 7 (a)."

He added other details which he said showed the necessity for a strike.

Labor Board May Act.

Meanwhile, prospects of intervention by the National Labor Relations Board, headed by Lloyd Garrison, increased.

On Friday, Gorman told Robert W. Bruere, chairman of the Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board, that "our experience in the operation of the Board gives us no confidence in its ability to adjust the issues now at stake in fairness to labor." He indicated he would prefer to submit the union's case to the National Labor Board, and three hours later he was closeted with Garrison.

A second conference was held Saturday night and union leaders were called out early yesterday for another session with Labor Board members. Gorman declined to divulge the outcome of the conferences but indicated the strike committee had not closed the door upon negotiations with Garrison. He emphasized, however, that the strike would be held as scheduled, regardless of any negotiations, unless labor's demands were met.

Textile Union's Grievances.

The union's grievances have been listed officially as:

"The stretch-out system has been so widely inaugurated throughout the industry as to constitute a sweeping and inhuman method of operation from which there must be relief.

"The volume of employment has declined steadily since immediately after the cotton textile code went into effect.

"Average weekly earnings have declined under the code.

"There has been a sweeping and intolerable practice of discharging workers for union affiliation in clear violation of section 7 (a) of the industrial recovery act."

The union's statements are in sharp conflict with the claims by industry of increased employment and higher payrolls under the cotton textile code.

In pushing plans for the general walkout, the strike committee had a pledge of "full support" from President Green of the American Federation of Labor.

The federation is assigning trained organizers to assist textile union field workers. On Wednesday night Green will make a Nation-wide radio address on behalf of the mill workers.

ties into more or less direct competition with private business enterprise, to the injury of the latter."

Citing the Tennessee Valley authority, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, the Public Works Administration, and other agencies as tending to intervene directly in business and compete with private citizens, the survey says that while in some instances the intervention was warranted by an emergency, "there is a real danger that those powers will be perpetuated and extended until legitimate private business is buried under a mountain of bureaucracy."

"From the standpoint of business recovery," the survey continues, "the conclusion is obvious. The revival for which the Federal Government is striving so arduously can come about only through individual initiative, and that initiative is being stifled, rather than encouraged, by the restrictions and limitations that have been placed upon it, with the threat of further obstacles yet to come."

arrested Ciuffreda, who told police that he was the landlord of the building and did not know the group and Cicione, Berry, and Miss Cash.

Police were reluctant to discuss the arrests. Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott, assigned to investigate the case, said to reporters, "I know nothing about it."

Cicione was taken to Gallinger Hospital yesterday evening for examination after he complained of intense pains in his stomach.

Another car with New York license plates was confiscated by police. It was found near the apartment. It is allegedly a stolen machine.

During the day police broadcast an alarm for "two white men, both armed, and two white women, traveling in a dark-bodied coupe." This broadcast gave credence to the belief that Lyles, who escaped, was traveling with Theophil Tiverny, the third of the trio of Back, Lyles and Tiverny, who escaped from Lorton Reformatory in a carpenter's auto.

The seven prisoners will be paraded before witnesses of recent holdups at a police line-up today, together with the three heavily armed Texans, Robert L. Anderson, 21, of Temple, Tex.; Lindon F. Bogle, 31, and Roy J. Moreland, 25, of Fort Worth, Tex., who were arrested by Washington police Saturday night and ordered held for investigation in connection with recent holdups.

Report Sent to Roosevelt Points to Pay Rises and Hour Cuts.

as the relief of unemployment, including therein relief from unprofitable employment (in industry through inadequate wages and in agriculture through inadequate prices)."

The report does not undertake to give any measure of the unemployment problem at the beginning of the Roosevelt Administration, except to cite figures of the activities of the National Reemployment Service and the State Employment Service, which, it explains, is not an accurate gauge of unemployment, but does constitute an impressive evidence of the volume of unemployment to be relieved.

Under the heading of "Relief Through Private Enterprise," the report states that as of August 1, last, 495 codes of fair competition and 136 supplementary codes had been approved by the NRA, "covering 95 per cent of all industrial employes."

"Reliable figures indicate that 40,180,000 persons were employed in the United States in June, 1934, an increase of 4,120,000 over the low figure of March, 1933, and an increase of 2,320,000 over June, 1933," the report continued.

"The latter increase is mainly due to shortening of hours under NRA codes. Reemployment under the codes rose and declined in separate trades and industries throughout the year, from seasonal and other causes, so the gross volume of reemployment far exceeded the foregoing net increase, having been estimated at more than 3,000,000 workers. The increase of 1,800,000 prior to the NRA can be attributed partly to the revival of business, brought about by other Federal activities and partly to anticipation of increased labor costs under the NRA program."

The report contended that the effect of the minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the codes was shown "in the estimated increase in labor's share in the National income from 58.3 per cent in June, 1933, to 62.5 per cent in June, 1934." The report estimated that total wages in manufacturing industries rose from $96,000,000 a week in June, 1933, to $132,000,000 a week in June, 1934, or 37.5 per cent.

Inference Held Misleading.

At this point the report is somewhat misleading, through an improper juxtaposition of figures—although the impression is later corrected but without emphasis—when it is stated that "when this increase of 37.5 per cent is compared with an increased living cost of 9.6 per cent, there remains, despite increased cost of living, a net increase of 25 per cent in the total purchasing power of manufacturing wage earners."

Although it does not say that, the impression of the above is that the manufacturing wage earner as an individual has received a 25 per cent increase in real wages. A good part of the increase in total pay rolls went to workers last June, who in the same month of 1933 were without jobs. This it might be said they had an increase of 100 per cent.

The wrong impression given by that statement, however, was corrected in part by the next paragraph in the report which stated:

"The individual wage earners did not obtain a similar increase—the average per capita weekly earnings in manufacturing rising only 8.5 per cent. Therefore, the average manufacturing worker's purchasing power remained practically unchanged, although by shortening hours he 'shared his work' with new employes, without an individual loss in 'real wages.'"

Food Rise Ignored.

As a matter of fact, on the basis of the figures given, the average manufacturing worker's purchasing power did not remain unchanged because his wage increased but 8.5 per cent in June and his cost of living advanced 9.6 per cent. The disparity would be much larger if the basis of comparison was August instead of June, since foodstuffs have shown a substantial advance since June and may go even higher.

That is all the report has to say regarding the effect of the "New Deal" on the cost of living. From the titles listed for the succeeding reports there is no clue that any of them will contain a further discussion of the work of the NRA. It is in the field of price-fixing and alleged maladjustment of prices that the NRA has been an object of criticism.

The report pointed out that the NRA had improved labor conditions in many ways, including the elimination of child labor, reduction of working hours, increase in wage rates, reduction of sweat-shop employment, controlling of health and safety standards and advancement of the right of labor to organize.

Work Week Slashed.

"The work week has been reduced from June, 1933, to June, 1934, approximately six hours on the average for all industries," the report stated. "There has been a much greater decline in industries of high activity and a lower decline in those operating at low levels.

"Average hourly earnings have been increased about 26 per cent; wage differentials have been materially decreased. Average hours in June, 1934, were 37 hours per week; and average wages 55.2 cents per hour. The advance in wages is directly due to NRA codes, since after previous depressions wage rates have advanced very little in the early stages of recovery."

Under the codes trade associations have nearly doubled, with large membership increases while the American Federation of Labor has added 2,000,000 members and other union organizations have shown "large increases."

"The increase of numbers and memberships of so-called 'company unions' ((even though not regarded by the National unions as adequate labor organizations) marks at least an increase in the mechanisms of labor association available for the collective bargaining contemplated in the act."

Trade Failures Less.

After citing figures of increased production between March, 1933, and June—they have since declined—the report contended that from February to May, 1934, the figures for business failures were more than 40 per cent lower than in 1929 and adds that "this index particularly shows the effect of NRA codes in protection of small enterprises wherein most business failures occur."

Pointing out the increase in corporation profits the report held as "noteworthy the rise in the index of corporation profits from the deficit figure of 6.9 in the first quarter of 1933 to the profit figure of 33.2 in the second quarter of 1934."

In parenthesis, it is stated that: "According to the Standard Statistics Co., net profits of 506 companies of all types rose from $157,579,000 in the first half of 1933 to $408,572,000 in the first half of 1934, an increase of over 200 per cent," and that "according to the same source net profits of 402 industrial companies rose from $47,380,000 in the first half of 1933 to $335,870,000 in the first half of 1934, an increase of over 600 per cent."

Indirect Benefit Claimed.

"The exact contribution of NRA to this industrial recovery can not be established statistically," the report added, "but the coincidence of business improvement with the NRA codification and the obvious, direct effects of NRA in preventing destructive price-cutting, in stabilizing business operations, in improving the total purchasing power by providing increased employment without reduction of compensation and in increase of prices from loss levels to profit levels, demonstrate the dominant influence of the NRA in this industrial advance."

In addition, the report went into some detail to show that the NRA had been responsible for stabilization and increased activity for the automobile, bituminous coal and petroleum industries.

Under "Relief through public works," the report summarized the activities of PWA and other agencies spending money to put men to work. It showed that of the $3,700,000,000 available to PWA all but $35,000,000 has been allocated, with $1,578,000,000 being ear-marked for Federal projects.

PWA Extension Urged.

The report stated 99 per cent of all counties have at lease one PWA project, that at present 675,000 men are employed directly on PWA construction sites, that 30 per cent of all PWA allotments have been spent and that work is progressing faster on Federal projects than on non-Federal, but fastest of all on public roads and railroad projects. It is recommended PWA be extended two years after June 1935.

This summary is followed by some details of the work of various agencies. As an example of the selective method used in preparing the report, nothing is said about the difficulties encountered in the establishment of the subsistence homestead at Reedsville, W. Va., in the description of the work being done along that line.

The second report, covering "Relief of Agricultural Distress," will be completed prior to August 29, Mr. Richberg stated. Subsequent reports will deal with "Relief of Destitution," "Relief of Financial Pressures," "Advance in Public Services" and "Promotion of Foreign Trade."

Richberg Says Only Facts Are Used, But Dark Side Is Ignored.

Veterans to Gather At Ocean City, Md.

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.). Veterans of all wars from Maryland, Delaware and Virginia, will meet here September 2, L. Griffin Calahan, commander of the American Legion post No. 93 and candidate for the Maryland State Senate, announces.

The bugle corps from Salisbury and the Cambridge Band will lead a parade beginning at the pier at 3 p. m. At 4 p. m. the Coast Guard will give a demonstration of aquatic sports. The veterans will be given a crab feast at the pier at 5 p. m. when Gen. Milton A. Record and C. L. Aiello, Maryland State commander of the Legion, will speak.

Allen to Push Construction Of Hospital

Society Heads Land Choice of Site at Glenn Dale.

The proposed $1,500,000 District hospital for adult tuberculosis patients, which for weeks has been in the controversial stage, now enters the construction stage.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who has been on his vacation in Mississippi, returns to Washington today, and he is expected to do everything possible to speed up the construction of the hospital.

The long-drawn-out controversy as to where the institution was to be built ended Saturday when President Roosevelt, on the advice of a special board of medical advisers, chose Glen Dale, Md., on the Defense Highway. Glenn Dale, about 15 miles from Washington, already is the site of a children's tuberculosis hospital.

Allen Seeks Speed.

Commissioner Allen, who has jurisdiction over District welfare matters, has taken a vital interest in the proposed hospital. He was much distressed by the controversy over where it was to be located, not only because he favored Glenn Dale, but because of the delay. He is anxious now to hasten construction of the institution.

The sum of $100,000 was made available at the last session of Congress for drawing plans.

The cost of the hospital itself will be taken care of by a grant of $1,500,000 from the Public Works Administration. This sum was authorized by Congress after it had been shown that the death rate from tuberculosis in the District was fourth highest in the United States.

Plan Model Hospital.

In order that the hospital at Glenn Dale shall be a model of its kind, the Commissioners are expected to call on the United States Public Health Service for advice and assistance.

Settlement of the controversy was welcomed by those who have been crusading for additional tuberculosis facilities here. Mrs. Cora Grant, executive secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, said:

"President Roosevelt's decision regarding the Glenn Dale site delighted me.

"Now the District Commissioners can go forward immediately to bring about the completion of a great municipal tuberculosis hospital center, the objective toward which all those interested in the control of tuberculosis have been working for many years."

Calls Problem Greatest One Now Separating Two Countries.

for nothing. We must fight for everything—and we shall.

"The greater the difficulties, the harder we shall fight. One thing is certain—we shall never capitulate."

Hitler then said that, if forced Germany could stand on her own feet economically.

He denied Nazi-ism means turning away from religion.

"The opposite is true," he asserted. "National Socialism stands on a basis of positive Christianity."

State Protects Religion.

He explained that "the state protects religion, but it will not tolerate the misuse of religion for political ends. Everybody knows we are battling against godlessness and a decay of morals, and we may be sure God's blessing will rest on our work, which we shall pursue relentlessly. I am confident that the section of the clergy which remains in opposition will abandon its hostility."

Making an emotional appeal directly to the Saar residents, Hitler asserted:

"The happiest moment of my life shall be the moment 800,000 people of the Saar land will be welcomed back with open arms into the home fold, without regard to beliefs and convictions.

"Be of good cheer. The whole German nation is behind you. When the bells ring January 14 heralding the joyful event may they also ring in happier times for two nations which once faced each other as enemies."

70,000 in Saar Fight Return to Germany

Sulzbach, The Saar, Aug. 26 (AP).—Seventy thousand Saar residents pledged themselves today to vote against return of the Saar to Germany at the plebiscite January 13. The pledge was administered by a Socialist leader named Braun.

While Chancellor Hitler at Coblenz extolled the benefits of a reunion with Germany, a mass meeting here organized by the "liberty front" was addressed by speakers of all opinions, including a Roman Catholic priest.

All the speakers urged the audience to "strive to the utmost for status quo."

Two Nazis threw bottles of foul-smelling liquid when Braun took the stand. They were handed over to police.

Anchorage Found In Aleutian Waste By 'Glacier Priest'

Aboard the Expedition Ship Amelia, Aug. 26 (By Wireless to the Associated Press).—Discovery of an anchorage at Bogoslof Island in the "Graveyard of the Aleutians," was announced today by Father Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., after a stay at the famous disappearing island, which has puzzled Arctic navigators for years.

The anchorage is of inestimable value to ships in the Behring Sea, the "Glacier Priest" said, providing a safe haven for vessels bound to and from Nome and other Behring Sea ports. Rearing out of the sea near Unimak Pass, one of the roughest water passages in the world, Bogoslof has been shunned because of its deep waters and treacherous reefs.

The anchorage, which will offer protection from prevailing southeast gales, was discovered Wednesday by Father Hubbard and members of his expedition, now en route to the Katmai region of the Alaska Peninsula.

Unusually calm seas enabled the Amelia to approach the reefs and sand bars with nominal danger, the "Glacier Priest" said.

"We were the first boat on record to anchor at Bogoslof," Father Hubbard said. "We found an anchorage that will provide shelter for any of the ships that ply the Behring Sea."

The Coast Guard cutter Chelan was dispatched the following day to check observations and soundings made.

New Clues Sought In Murder of Coed

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 26 (AP).—Officers investigating the slaying of Faye New, Howard College co-ed, today again undertook a minute search of the area surrounding the spot where the girl was slain in the hope of new clues.

Harold Taylor, in jail charged with murder, continued to deny that he committeed the crime.

Hitler Deified By Nazis, Says Wife of Lewis

Is "No Longer Man," Says Dorothy Thompson on Arrival in Paris.

Paris, Aug. 26 (AP).—Dorothy Thompson, American newspaper and magazine writer "invited" to leave Germany, arrived here today, and in a spirited description of her adventure, said, "Chancellor Hitler is no longer a man; he is a religion."

Miss Thompson, in private life Mrs. Sinclair Lewis, wife of the novelist, was asked by the secret police at Berlin yesterday to leave the country immediately. Presumably an article she wrote three years ago, when Hitler still was striving to become "Der Fuehrer," gave offense to the Nazis.

She was of the opinion today that her expulsion "is evidently a part of a campaign of terrorism against foreign correspondents."

"Most Hygienic Prison."

"Germany," the American writer continued, "is a charming country, but it is becoming the most comfortable and most hygienic prison in the world."

"Miss Thompson had memorized the letter from German officials asking her to leave. As French correspondents swarmed about her, when the Berlin express came to a stop, she repeated it verbatim.

She found that Paris was intensely interested in her encounter with Nazi officialdom. The newspapers gave prominence to the incident.

May Be Goebbel's Fault.

"Perhaps my expulsion is a direct application of the system of Propaganda Minister Goebbels," Miss Thompson said. "He thinks the best way to conciliate foreign opinion is to suppress all information about Germany which does not emanate from him."

Asked what she thought was the real reason for her order to leave, she said:

"I don't understand it. I haven't written any articles recently. I am almost certain the action was taken because I wasn't lucky enough to please Hitler with my interview three years ago. Several old articles about the Jewish question also may have contributed to my unpopularity."

Washington Plans No Official Protest

State Department officials yesterday indicated no protest against the German government's "invitation" to Dorothy Thompson to leave the country would be made unless she requested it, according to the Associated Press.

Such matters, they said, would be handled by United States Representatives abroad. The State Department's policy was described as one of "noninterference" with foreign government's opinion of what Americans should be allowed to remain in those countries.

Big 'Gas' Cargo Held 'Bootleg'

Court Restrains Tanker From Unloading at Seattle.

Seattle, Aug. 26 (AP).—A temporary injunction restraining the master of the tanker Papoose from unloading his cargo of alleged bootleg gasoline in the Puget Sound area was issued here by Federal Judge John C. Bowen today as the tramp ship steamed down the sound to Tacoma and anchored.

The district attorney's office alleged in the complaint that the cargo, amounting to 3,000,000 gallons, would demoralize the retail gasoline business if dumped in this area.

The office of Secretary Ickes, the oil administrator, said the gasoline was illegally produced, in excess of proration regulations, in Texas fields. Officials of the shipping company denied the charge.

Exact whereabouts of the Papoose had been a mystery since her master was denied a permit last week to discharge 69,000 barrels of gasoline at Richmond, on San Francisco Bay.

Prince George Denies Engageement to Marina

London, Aug. 26 (AP).—Prince George of England was quoted today in the Daily Mail as denying recent rumors he was engaged to marry Princess Marina of Greece.

The prince issued the denial while attending a music festival at Salzburg, accompanied by Prince Paul and Princess Olga of Yugoslavia, and by Princess Marina.

Parley on NRA Set Tomorrow By Roosevelt

President to Plot Course of New Deal During Hyde Park Stay.

the country, Dutchess County—the rich and contented Hudson Valley of Washington Irving—lets Mr. Roosevelt come and go with the same attention it might accord any other of the "home folks."

His Brother Greets Him.

After a smile and a word or two with friends, the President tugged down his slouch hat and drove the few miles up hill to the stone and stucco home overlooking the river that his father built for his bride more than half a century ago. In so doing he converted the comfortable, rambling old mansion from the country home of a gentleman into the hub of a busy Government.

The house sits back a quarter of a mile from the Albany Post road. Passing the stone gateposts, the President surveyed his pasture at the right and his cornfield on the left, then looked anxiously ahead for the home of his boyhood. There, awaiting him after a trip to Europe, stood Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, his mother, who had thought to bring her son several yards of Scottish tweed for a new suit, heavy against the cold.

Sheltered within the several thousand acres that comprise his mother's estate, the President lolled about all day. As is his custom, he got out his small car, operated by manual control, and went for a drive about the back country roads during the afternoon. A favorite spot is "The Cottage," designed and constructed by the President for recreation, a few miles behind the mansion.

There the Roosevelts are wont to gather every afternoon, sip tea and perhaps go for a swim in a small pool on the lawn. As evidence of the ability of all of them as swimmers, the shallowest part of the pool is 6 feet deep.

In the "Big House" itself, helpers unbundled stacks of papers. The President's cubby-hole library, which he uses for an office, was in shape, of course—his mother had seen to that. It is a plain room, decorated chiefly by the maritime prints the President loves always to have about him.

Plans Auto Tour Today.

But even as the President made ready for several weeks of relaxation and quiet study with the "New Dealers" who will visit him, he set aside tomorrow for a roundabout automobile tour of the countryside. On a trip of about 150 miles, he will visit two penal institutions, enjoy a picnic lunch, and top it off with a review at West Point.

Leaving about 10 a. m. the President will head a procession of about a dozen cars to Wallkill, a "medium security" prison (without walls) across the Hudson. Then he will go to Warwick State School, a boys' reformatory at Middletown which was one of his pet projects as Governor of New York. About 3 p. m. he will receive honors at West Point, watching the cadets in review. He will return before dusk.

The President is not expected to leave his car, except perhaps at West Point. Ordinarily on his inspection trips about the State, he is driven to a central point, where he is greeted by officials. The picnic lunch, prepared by Mrs. Roosevelt, will be eaten at some point en route.

Offices at Poughkeepsie.

With the President at Hyde Park also are Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, the former Ruth Googins, of Texas, and the Elliott Roosevelts' baby daughter. His other three sons are away at different points in the East. His daughter, Mrs. Anna Dall, remained behind at Washington, but is expected up in a few days.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre set up executive offices at Poughkeespie and prepared a schedule of conferences for this week, beginning Tuesday. The President will see one or two lieutenants each day, plotting the course of the New Deal. Foremost of the questions he is to deal with here are reorganization of the NRA and the formulation of "social legislation" for the next session of Congress. Among those he will see are Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

An unusually large staff of assistants was brought from the White House. Half the second floor of a Poughkeepsie hotel was taken over to accommodate them. There the President's mail and telephone calls are handled, in charge of Jule A. Rodier, a White House veteran who is making his first trip with Mr. Roosevelt. The President is within a moment's reach by confidential telephone of Washington.

Iselin Grooms Beagles In Moonlight Trials

Middleburg, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—C. Oliver Iselin, of Woolver Hill, near Middleburg, has been hunting his prize beagle pack at night during the full moon all this week in early preparation for the opening of the beagle hunting season next month.

The Woolver pack, one of the finest in the country, are being groomed for the National beagle trials in November at the Institute Farms of the National Beagle Club, Aldie, Va., where in previous years Mr. Iselin's entries have been consistent winners.

Hagerstown Sued for $5,000 Flood Damage

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.). The mayor and city council of Hagerstown has been named defendant in a $5,000 damage suit filed here by Nick and Rose Dattilio, farm owners.

The suit alleges that the city, in an effort to divert overflow water from the Raven Rock reservoir, caused about 30 acres of their farm to be flooded.

Reich Faces Trade Chaos, Schacht Says

Minister Warns Foreign Countries to Revise Debt Attitude.

our debts could be advanced," Schacht said.

"Under such threats they forced upon Germany transfer agreements through which some creditor countries tried to obtain preferential treatment which in no way afford a constructive solution of the whole problem.

"Instead of making such attempts as are usual in business life to make a debtor who is willing to pay, and who through no fault of his own has gotten into economic difficulties, again capable of paying, they appear in the role of competing creditors who want to get as much for themselves as possible."

Schacht asserted that Germany can not get the money to buy the necessary "devisen" for debt payments because other countries do not take sufficient goods from Germany.

"The present debt situation not only continues to ruin existing business but it also has brought no advantage to the creditor whom it pretends to favor. The transfer agreements which have been forced on us make every existing trade balance disappear. They paralyze every transit business. They conduct trade into unnatural channels. Scarcely any surpluses remain for buying raw materials."

Schacht asserted that tax reductions by the Nazi government and employment projects help the world by increasing buying power. But he complained that foreign countries were unwilling to take more German products and were unwilling to meet Germany half way on the debt question.

Raw Imports Cut in Half.

Germany's raw material imports have been cut 50 per cent since February, but measures to reduce imports "have not had complete success," Schacht said, because existing purchasing contracts had to be fulfilled. Another reason, he said, was that special accounts in foreign banks of issue worked unfavorably upon the mark, took no consideration of importation of "uneconomic" wares and permitted partly finished materials to be imported.

"I had no doubt foreign governments would have collected long ago on agreements if these conditions had been changed," Schacht said. "They not only make Germany unable to pay its old debts, but also prevent Germany from appearing in the world market as a buyer. They forced Germany into a state of so-called autarchy.

"The experiences of the past year have proved that by deflation one reduces world trade but can not increase it. Regarding devaluation, we've always been specific in stating that we are not ready to enter the race for deflated currencies. Devaluation would be the same as increasing our foreign debts".

Foreign exchange restrictions, Schacht continued, can no longer be maintained for they "give neither the German not the foreign producer assurance that an imported product can be paid for when payment is due."

Politics too long have threatened the mercantile life of the Nation, Schacht continued. "I am determined to end this condition," he asserted. "The only direct way is for us to bring our imports into harmony with our possibility of paying for them. The blame for defaulted payments on goods and debts rests as much on the foreign importer as on the German buyer.

"I, therefore, warn all thoughtless importers not to become involved beyond the degree of their permits for payments.

"We wish to claim no credit which is not given us gladly and voluntarily. We are entirely clear on one fact—that the new system must lead to a noticeable limitation of our imports, for we can extend foreign exchange permits only as far as foreign exchange is available."

Leaders Look To Maine for Election Test

Democrats Seek New Deal Indorsement by Defeat of Hale.

(Associated Press.)

Republican and Democratic chiefs intend to bring their preliminary campaigns to a head next month. The big prizes of the House and Senate will not be offered generally until the November elections. But on September 10, Maine, which always votes ahead of the pack, elects a Senator, three Representatives and a Governor.

Republicans say that if Maine, which now has a Democratic Governor and two Representatives of the same party, returns to the G. O. P. column the outcome will have a decided effect on the November results in other States.

Democrats, however, seek to defeat the veteran Republican Senator, Frederick Hale, with F. Harold Dubord, capture the line Republican House seat, and return Gov. Louis J. Brann, in an effort to claim indorsement of the "New Deal" by that normally Republican State.

Tomorrow's primaries in California, Mississippi and South Carolina, however, are considered important. Senator Hiram Johnson, Republican independent supporter of President Roosevelt, appears likely to receive both the Democratic and Republican nominations in California in view of Administration backing. The Democratic gubernatorial nomination race, in which Upton Sinclair, former Socialist, George Creel and others are contesting, is worrying National leaders. Fears have been expressed by some Democratic leaders that if Sinclair is nominated, it might bring defeat of the eleven Democratic House members in the November election.

Senator Hubert Stephens has two opponents for the Mississippi Democratic senatorial nomination, tantamount to election. They are Theodore G. Bilbo, former Governor, and Representative Ross Collins.

South Carolina does not have a senatorial election this year.

Primaries in 13 States and conventions in five are scheduled in September. Candidates for 15 of the 35 Senate seats to be filled in November, 134 of the 435 House seats, and 14 of the 34 governorships, will be selected.

The contests start with the Democratic convention in Utah September 1, where Senator King has opposition. The Republicans selected former Representative Don B. Colton at their convention in July to oppose King, or the man who defeats him.

Senator Key Pittman, president pro tempore of the Senate, has two opponents for the Nevada Democratic nomination in the senatorial primaries September 4.

Arizona, Michigan, Vermont and Washington select senatorial and Congressional nominees September 11, Maryland on September 12 and New York September 13. Colorado, Louisiana and New Hampshire name candidates for the House on September 11, with Georgia on the following day.

The other primaries are in Wisconsin, September 18, Massachusetts September 20, while conventions will be held on different dates in Connecticut, Delaware, New Mexico and Rhode Island.

Grocers to Fight Food Price Rises

Public Will Be Protected, Chain Stores Say.

Assurances that the consuming public will be protected against food profiteering were given administration officials yesterday in a telegram sent to President Roosevelt by the members of the Food and Grocery Chain Stores of America. F. H. Massman, of Chicago, president of the association which numbers more than 23,000 stores, signed the telegram.

The message states: "I desire to assure you of the whole-hearted cooperation of our association in behalf of the worthy effort to protect the consumer against unwarranted price advances."

ers were unable to learn who was driving their car.

Family Was Waiting.

The bodies of Abramson and his sister were released by officials of the coroner's office at Woodstown and arrangements were completed last night to remove the dead to the Bernard Danzansky mortuary here.

Waiting for Morris Abramson in Atlantic City where they have been vacationing for several weeks were his wife, Lillian, and their three children, Jeanette, 14; Thelma, 7 and a 3-month-old baby boy. The Abramson party planned to return to the Capital today.

Mrs. Teplitzky left in Washington her husband, Harry, and two children, Sidney, 16, and Shirley, 12. Mrs. Clara Abramson, Morris' sister-in-law, wife of his brother, David, is the mother of Selma, 11, and Hariett Abramson, 8.

Morris Abramson leaves, besides his wife and children and his brother, David, two brothers, Benjamin and Samuel, vice president and secretary of the clothing company, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Abramson, of New York city.

In the Salem County Jail at Salem last night sat Purslog, driver of the car into which the Abramson machine crashed, awaiting arraignment today on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Butler Will Speak At Army Reunion

Twenty-Ninth to Meet at Baltimore Sept. 1.

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Speakers at the annual reunion of the Twenty-ninth Division here September 1 to 3, will include Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C. (retired), and Mayor F. J. Bright, of Richmond, Va, it was announced today.

Invitations have been sent out to 15,000 former members of the division in Maryland, Virginia and adjacent States. All who attend are asked to wear their uniforms; those who have not their uniforms are requested to wear blue suits, white shirts, and blue ties. A parade will be a feature of the convention.

It will open with welcome to Maryland by Gov. Ritchie, Mayor Jackson, and Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Twenty-ninth Division. Other speakers at the various sessions will include Harold Hoffman, Republican nominee for Governor of New Jersey; Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the Third Army Corps Area; Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie, commander of the Fifty-eighth Brigade, Maryland National Guard, and Col. Amos. W. W. Woodcock, a World War veteran and now president-elect of St. John's College at Annapolis.

3 Youths Arraigned On Gas Theft Charge

Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 26 (Spl.). Three more young men of the Williamson neighborhood were arraigned here yesterday on charges of stealing gas from a pump at the quarry of Harry T. Goetz at Williamson.

They are John Horsh, Floyd Horsh and Edwin Gossard. Five other youths were previously arraigned and held for court.

Five Screen Figures Named in Tax Liens

Los Angeles, Aug. 26 (AP).—Hollywood film figures were named in income tax liens on file today in Federal court.

Sir Guy Standing was alleged to owe the Government $312 additional taxes for the 1933 period. Others named were Crane Wilbur, $63 for 1933; Reginald Denny, $98 for 1933; Bette Davis, $173 for 1933; and Ralph Graves, $722 for 1933.

Catsonis Is Elected President of Ahepa

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 26 (AP).—Achilles Catsonis, of Washington, today was announced as the newly elected president of Ahepa, Greek-American fraternity. The attorney, who had been supreme secretary, won in balloting early today.

Chicago was chosen for the 1935 convention.

ing a strong dislike for his impromptu crib.

Sister Sacristie carried him inside and summoned Twelfth Precinct Police. Policeman Harry Sullivan arrived. He admitted that abandoned babies were slightly out of his line, but agreed to take charge. So, with an escort from the Women's Bureau, he took the infant to Children's Hospital.

There it didn't take long for nurses to find a name for the new guest—"Harry" for Policeman Sullivan and "Trinity" for Trinity College. Doctors immediately went to work and pronounced young "Harry" physically fit and none the worse for his sojourn on the chapel steps. He will stay in the hospital while police attempt to locate his mother.

The note on the baby's basket, printed in pencil on a slip of blue paper, read:

"My baby is 4 weeks and 3 days old. I hate to give him up, but I have to. I can't support him. His father died five months before he was born. He is of good Irish-German parents. Take care of him—please. Four level tablespoons of powdered milk in 4 ounces of water after it has been boiled."

Little "Harry" was neatly clothed in a pink knitted sweater, white dress and blue blanket. In the basket was found an extra supply of baby food and additional clothing. Late last night no trace had been found of the mother.

Schall Repeats Censor Charge

New Letter to President Cites Press Code and Bank Shares.

Senator Schall (Republican), Minnesota, reiterated yesterday in another letter to President Roosevelt that the Administration seeks to censor the press. Saturday the President denied such a charge in a telegram to Schall, declaring "The incident is closed."

"Your conclusion to me that the 'incident is closed' will in no way, Mr. President, satisfy the people of their fear of where you are unconstitutionally steering their republic," Schall said, according to the Associated Press.

"If you desire specific information as the basis of my reasonable inference that the Government is about to coordinate its various and sundry publicity functions into a National press service, you have only to assemble the following 'makings' thereof:

"The White House daily statements. * * *

"The press code, which aims to dominate the publishers. * * *

"The Rayburn communications act, controlling radio, telegraph, cable and telephone communication. * * *

"Your control of the business offices of the press by Government investment of $1,000,000,000 in the preferred shares of over 6,000 banks. * * *"

As he was sending his letter, Schall received one from the Commercial Telegraphers Union which said: "If the unspeakable claptrap contained in your two letters to the President of the United States is the best evidence you have in support of your charges, Minnesota had better get busy."

Briton Tries Again On Greenland Hop

Atlantic Flight in Light Plane Meets Trouble.

Angmagsalik, Greenland, Aug. 26 (AP).—John Grierson, British aviator attempting to cross the North Atlantic in a light plane, took off here this morning for Godthaab, Greenland.

Grierson, expressing the hope that the worst part of his often-interrupted journey is past, predicted he will reach Ottawa soon. He added that he will not attempt to make an eastward crossing of the ocean in his little plane.

Three attempts to make the flight to Godthaab yesterday were unsuccessful. Twice he tried to lift his plane from the drift ice in the Fiord where it was moored. On the second attempt he reached the ice cap in central Greenland, but poor visibility forced him to a height of 10,000 feet, where ice formed on his wings. He returned two hours later.

Fairbanks Skips Trip To Visit With Mary

Hollywood, Aug. 26 (AP).—Douglas Fairbanks and his estranged wife, Mary Pickford, went motoring to the actor's Rancho Zorro near San Diego today.

They spent the morning looking at the tree plantings, the horses and cattle. The couple used to ride together here often. Doug cancelled a scheduled yachting trip with Joseph Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, associate film executives, to be with Mary.

Beaten Official In Onion Town To Accuse Foes

To Invoke Lindbergh Law Against Kidnapers, He Says From Bed.

McGuffey, Ohio, Aug. 26 (AP).—Still bedfast from a beating administered when he was abducted yesterday in onion strike disorders, Okey Odell, president of the Agriculture Workers' Union, said today he will seek to invoke the "Lindbergh" kidnaping law to punish his assailants.

Odell charged that Hardin County officers will not permit him to file State charges, and told reporters that J. M. Rizor, American Federation of Labor organizer, will go to Toledo, Ohio, tomorrow to prefer kidnaping charges in Federal court against some of his 200 assailants.

Odell's announcement came as quiet returned to this village of 700 persons following a day and night of tension. After the home of Mayor Godfrey J. Ott was bombed, Odell was arrested for questioning. He then was taken from sheriff's deputies and driven 14 miles from town, where he was released after being kicked and beaten. Despite a warning not to return, Odell hitch-hiked his way back.

The 38-year-old union leader was guarded, bedfast in his tiny cottage, by friends who had turned it into a small fortress.

The Odell bodyguards were prepared for a threatened return of the crowd that ordered their leader to leave town last night. A threatened second visitation failed to materialize and Odell, from his bed, said he was prepared to go into court and identify at least 20 of his captors.

Sheriff Wilbur Mitchell said, "Odell would not be denied the right to ask a warrant in any justice of the peace court in Hardin County." Sheriff's deputies insisted they were unable to prevent the seizure of Odell.

Representatives of antistrike groups let it be known a vigilance committee of 300 persons had been organized secretly "to retaliate for any further violence." They said the committee was made up of "indignant workers." Leaders of the committee said they also were determined to rid the community of "undesirable strikers."

Persian Courts League Council

Seeks Seat China Now Holds, as Spokesman for Far East Nations.

Geneva, Aug. 26 (AP).—International politics as played through the League of Nations took on a new aspect with the announcement today that Persia has demanded a seat in the league council.

China's three-year term of membership in the council expires this year. Persia has filed her candidacy "as representing countries of the Far East." Persia thereby indicated that she aspires specifically to the seat held by China.

The terms of Spain and Panama also will expire shortly. Indications are that Spain will be re-elected without difficulty. For Panama's seat it is expected that Chile will file a candidacy.

In league circles it is expected that Russia will be admitted to the league in September. It is believed, however, that Russia will demand a permanent seat in the council, thus qualifying it to receive the same treatment as other great powers.

Ritchie Holds Key in Bitter Primary Row

Governor's Return Will Signal Rush for His Indorsement.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

With the return from Europe this week of Gov. Ritchie, the Maryland political pot is expected to start boiling with a new intensity, although the Governor is the least concerned of all the candidates.

But his presence in the State will set into motion activity that has been backed up since his departure in July. In many instances advice from the Governor will be instrumental in breaking political deadlocks existing in some of the local and Congressional Democratic fights, which are not only numerous but in some cases of a particularly sharp nature.

Foremost, however, the State will be interested in seeing whether the Governor will take sides in the Democratic Senatorial contest between George L. Radcliffe and William Milnes Maloy, the former a challenger to the Governor in the early summer and the latter a challenger in 1926. When he left for Europe the Governor deliberately refrained from saying anything which might be regarded as an indorsement of Mr. Radcliffe's Senatorial aspirations, although at the time he was the only avowed candidate.

May Remain Neutral.

It is doubtful whether the Governor will indorse the Maloy candidacy but he may decide to keep hands off that fight, which would help Mr. Maloy. The latter opened his campaign during the last week and promised an active two weeks before primary day. He praised Mr. Radcliffe personally but indicated he would be dominated by his sponsor, Senator Tydings. Mr. Maloy contended the State should have two Senators, as provided by the Constitution.

Although considerable effort is being brought forth in Mr. Maloy's behalf there appears little doubt at this time Mr. Radcliffe will be nominated, not alone because of his organized support but because he is the friend of President Roosevelt—and the masses of Marylanders, like the masses almost everywhere, feel favorably inclined toward the President.

Another indication pointing to a Radcliffe victory came last week when William Curran, the Baltimore leader, personally accompanied the candidate to several political meetings and introduced him at two of them. Mr. Curran did not take to the Radcliffe candidacy at first and it was even reported that he was backing Mr. Maloy quietly. His action last week should dispose of that report.

Nice Gathers Strength.

The Republican contest continues without much excitement, except that H. Webster Smith, one of the gubernatorial candidates, was booed when he entered territory claimed by his opponent, Harry W. Nice, at Dundalk. The prevailing opinion in Baltimore is that Mr. Nice will be the Republican gubernatorial nominee. The Republican senatorial contest, however, is a matter of conjecture.

Interest in Baltimore has been centered chiefly on local contests. Not only are the Ritchie leaders—Joseph O'Donnell and John Tormollan—in the South Baltimore district bitterly fighting to oust Gilbert A. Dailey, the Tydings patronage field marshall, but there is a free-for-all fight over three places on the supreme bench of the city. The latter contest is splitting the lawyers of the city into acrimonious camps. The Governor has been asked to take sides but the quarrel is so bitter it is doubtful he will.

Aside from the Republican Statewide fight over the gubernatorial and senatorial nominations, the interest in politics outside of Baltimore also is chiefly centered in local contests. Seldom has there been so many candidates for such places as Delegate to the Legislature, sheriff, county commissioner and State's attorney.

Such a plethora of candidates, totaling over 100 in many counties, indicates a large vote in the primary election on September 12, since each candidate has a circle of friends who will be active getting voters to the polls.

The Maryland picture should crystallize after next week and it should be possible to indicate the general drift in the Republican State-wide fights, although the prospect of a large turnout of voters always makes predictions precarious things.

New Buildings Ready At Foxcroft School

Middleburg, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Additions to the buildings of Foxcroft School, near here, which include a new building to be used as living quarters for members of the faculty and the addition of five classrooms and a dormitory to one of the main buildings, are nearing completion. They will be ready for the opening of the school on October 2.

Six hundred acres of land have been acquired by Foxcroft School for farming purposes.

Fire Damages Office Of Greencastle Firm

Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Fire, believed to have resulted from a short circuit, early this morning damaged the office and storeroom of the A. G. Crunkleton Electric Co.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. G. H. Clippinger, tenant in a building across the street. The blaze was confined by firemen to the second floor of the Crunkleton plant, but merchandise on the first floor was badly damaged by smoke and water.

89-Year-Old Staunton Band Active in War and Notable Events

The present Stonewall Brigade Band of Staunton, Va.

Instruments Which Grant Allowed Band to Keep After Appomattox Are Now in Staunton Municipal Building With Other Historic Relics.

By C. B. Carr.

Staunton, Va., Aug. 26.—Horses for spring plowing were not the only needs of the South when the Civil War terminated with the surrender at Appomattox by Gen. Robert E. Lee in 1865, members of the Stonewall Brigade Band of Staunton, an organization now nearing its ninetieth year of continuous activity, will tell you.

That musical strains in time of peace as well as in time of war were considered equally necessary with horses for plowing for the rehabilitation of the South after Appomattox was the opinion of Gen. Grant, the bandmen declare, as they point out that the Northern general allowed their organization to retain its musical instruments under the terms of surrender.

With a historical background that includes service in the war and at three expositions of international note, the Stonewall Brigade Band members are planning to glorify further their past with a celebration of their ninetieth birthday next year. Plans for the celebration are still in the embryo stage, but it is expected that prominent State figures will participate in the event.

The band is generally regarded as the oldest amateur organization of its kind in the United States. It was organized in Saunton in April, 1845, by Prof. A. J. Turner, beloved musician of this section in those days. It was originally known as the Mountain Saxhorn Band, a name which it retained until the Civil War, when its members volunteered for service and were mustered in as the Fifth Virginia Regimental Band.

Rendered Hospital Service.

During the first engagement in which its members were under fire the band organized itself into a hospital detachment, and so faithfully and efficiently rendered service in field and hospital during the ensuing days that Gen. Thomas J. ("Stonewall") Jackson, Confederate leader, signally honored the services of the group by an order at Camp Winder raising the band's rank to that of "Stonewall Brigade Band." Its director, Price T. Barnett, was made a captain.

The Stonewall Brigade Band served through the war, and at Appomattox Gen. Grant issued an order permitting the members to take home with them their instruments. This complete set of instruments—far different from those they use today—is sill in the possession of the band.

Another interesting portion of the band's historical collection is a series of muster rolls, dated 1862, 1863 and 1864, of the field staff and band of the Fifth Virginia Infantry Regiment containing the names of the band's members. The roll of August 31, 1863, records the movements and operations a Chancellorsville, the march into Pennsylvania, the battle of Gettysburg and the retreat into Virginia.

Players at Grant Funeral.

Following the war the Stonewall Brigade Band took up the activities of peace time. The band was given a post of honor at the funeral of Gen. Grant in New York City, and when the Grant Mausoleum was unveiled in that city in 1897, the organization was given a private reception by President McKinley, in whose honor they gave a concert.

Stonewall Brigade Band was the only amateur band employed by the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago. It had a prominent part in the Buffalo Exposition and accompanied the Governor of Virginia and his staff with the Richmond Light Infantry Blues to the St. Louis Exposition. The Blues, headed by the Stonewall Band, paraded at the exposition on Virginia Day.

Recent engagements of the Stonewall Brigade Band have included a musical program at the United States Chamber of Commerce banquet and a ten-day good-will trip to Florida, where the band gave concerts in 22 cities, the programs being broadcast at Atlanta, Jacksonville and Miami. On this trip the band visited the Confederate Memorial on Stone Mountain.

The band is incorporated under the laws of Virginia, its charter having been received in 1875. Officially it is the "Stonewall Brigade Band, First Division, Second Corps, Army of Northern Virginia." William A. Grubert, vice mayor of Staunton and former local councilman, is president of the band, and has been a member for more than 40 years.

When Staunton erected the new Municipal Building several years ago, quarters for the band were fitted out on the second floor. Since then the band has mounted its relics within the room until it has become a veritable Confederate museum. Included in this display of Confederate history are pictures of the original members of the band; concert programs of years ago, official war records, photostatically preserved, and copies of the band's charter while a hostory of the Stonewall Brigade and Stonewall Brigade Band almost covers the walls. The band's most cherished possession, however, is the set of original instruments which Gen. Grant allowed them to keep after Appomattox. These are displayed in a glass case under lock.

Has Revolutionary Bugle.

There is also a bugle, which, historical legend declares, was used in the Revolutionary and War of 1812. It is said that the last time the bugle was blown in battle was when James Tinsley, a Confederate soldier, was shot down while sounding the call to charge. This bugle has been in the possession of the family, a member of the band, since the American Revolution. When the local militia was summoned to colors in 1898 for the Spanish-American War, this bugle was used for the call. This bugle has been blown by a number of world renowned musicians visiting here, among them being Sousa, Levy, Clark, Arthur Pryor, Hoch, Chambers and Lieut. Dan Godfrey, of the "Queen's Own Band."

Maj. Roy W. Wonson, a member of the faculty of Staunton Military Academy, is director of the band. Past directors have included the late Prof. Joseph M. Brereton, who, after leaving Staunton, became director of the Aeca Temple Shrine Band, the Samis Grotto Band and the Boys' Band of the Masonic Home of Virginia; Capt. William H. Ruebush, of Dayton, Va., who directed a regimental band during the World War with the American Expeditionary Forces; Maj. Thomas Beardsworth, director of the Staunton Military Academy Band, and Martin G. Manch, head of the Institute of Musical Art here.

There are thirty-five members of Stonewall Brigade Band, none of whom are regarded as professional musicians. All are business men or tradesmen in the community, who play with the band because of their love for music, the association it brings and who are eager to carry on the traditions of the past.

Mrs. S. Travers Crowder, Staunton, the band's historian, recently penned these lines as a tribute to the organization:

Oh, Stonewall Band, may your glory and honor never fade,
May you always bear the Standard of the old Stonewall Brigade.

For the Stonewall Band played "Dixie"
In the days of Sixty-One
When the "Boys in Gray" were marching
Under the Southern sun.

Those "Boys in Gray" are now sleeping
Beneath the flag so true,
The flag they loved and fought for,
The bright Bonnie Flag of Blue.

Oh, Stonewall Band, your glory and fame will ever hold sway,
If you are true to the standard of Stonewall Jackson's way.

Virginia CCC Builds 2,244 Miles of Road

314 Miles of Telephone Wires Added, Forest Lands Improved.

Improvement of 60,799 acres of forest lands, reduction of fire hazards in 64,728 acres, construction of 2,244 miles of road and 314 miles of telephone lines was accredited to CCC camps in Virginia during the year ended March 31 in a report made public yesterday by Emergency Conservation Director Robert Fechner.

"Reports reaching me are to the effect that more forest protection and conservation work was accomplished in Virginia during the twelve months ended March 31, 1934, than during any previous year in the state's history," Mr. Fechner said.

"Trails have been built which will enable fire fighting equipment to move speedily to danger areas. Telephone lines have been strung through the forests which will make it possible for rangers to summon aid. Undergrowth, old dead trees and other inflammable material has been removed."

Sixty camps with an aggregate enrollment of 12,000 men are now scattered throughout the State, an increase of 15 in the number of camps set up during the first six-month period of conservation work, Mr. Fechner said.

During the past year, Mr. Fechner pointed out, several new areas had been added to Federal timber lands in the State, the chief among these being the Clinch National Forest unit in the valley of the Clinch River in southwestern Virginia, with an area of 658,000 acres.

Outstanding among the accomplishments of the CCC camps in the State listed by the director was the work of five companies in the Shenandoah National Park. Here woodlands were cleared and assistance was given in the construction of Skyline Drive which, when completed, will extend 80 miles from Front Royal to Williamsburg.

CCC workers in southeastern Virginia have turned to the study of colonial history to aid National Service historians in restoration of historical landmarks in the Colonial National Monument area.

School Closes Summer Session

Dance, Play on Program in Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Yesterday marked the closing exercises of the summer session of the Charlottesville School for Boys.

The program opened with a breakfast dance at 8 a. m. in the school auditorium. The students danced until noon, music being furnished by a Staunton. orchestra.

Certificates were awarded by R. S. Osborn, headmaster, to 20 students, diplomas to five, and velvet sweater jackets were received by John Kase, Kitty Mackreth, Douglas Reed and Herbert Arnett. These students received the award on a basis of popular sportmanship.

In the afternoon a play was presented by a group of pupils under the direction of Foster Graham.

William Henry Huber Rites Planned Today

Stephens City, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow afternoon for William Henry Huber, 69, Frederick County farmer who died in Memorial Hospital, Winchester, Friday night of pneumonia.

Mr. Huber contracted a throat infection following the threshing of grain on his farm a week ago. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Lulu Violette Huber, and a sister, Miss Catherine Huber, of Vaucluse.

Maryland Hunts 7-Foot Man; Capt. John Smith Described Him

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Wanted: A man 7 feet tall, the calf of whose leg measures three-quarters of a yard in circumference!

The Maryland Tercentenary Commission wants him. He is needed to represent an Indian of the Piscataway tribe of southern Maryland, of the kind seen by Capt. John Smith when he explored Chesapeake Bay several years before Lord Baltimore settled Maryland 300 years ago.

In Baltimore's observance of the Maryland Tercentenary, scheduled for the Stadium here October 5 and 6, it is planned to have at least one "Piscataway Indian" in the group surrounding the actor representing Lord Baltimore. But Matthew Page Andrews, director of the Tercentenary Commission, a historian himself, insists that the man who represents the Indian be of the physical measurements of the aborigines that Capt. John Smith saw.

The doughty captain's journal tells of Indians 7 feet tall and with a leg circumference of 27 inches—so any one with those measurements is asked to communicate with Dr. Andrews.

Tomorrow 23 beautiful girls, each representing one of the counties of Maryland, will call on Mayor Jackson at the City Hall and present him with flags of their respective counties. Many of these girls will be attendants upon Lady Baltimore at the pageant.

Man Asks $10,000 For Auto Injuries

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Arthur R. Collins, of Sharon, has filed suit in the Franklin County Court against Miss Mary E. Hoke, of Chambersburg, for $10,000 damages for injuries allegedly received September 4, 1932, when he said he was struck by the Hoke automobile on the Lincoln Highway, near here.

He asserts that Miss Hoke's automobile skidded when she applied the brakes too suddenly. The car struck Collins, he claims, and threw him into the path of an oncoming truck which in turn tossed him into the air. He landed on his head, the statement says, receiving a head laceration, concussion of the brain and several broken ribs.

Collins was an inspector at a Japanese beetle quarantine station. He asks compensation for 30 days hospitalization, expenses incident to his injuries and loss of wages.

Political Eyes Turn to State Legion Parley

No Radicalism Expected, But Virginia Election Adds Fillip.

By J. K. Irving, Jr.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 26.—The Virginia Division of the American Legion mobilizes here one week from today for its annual convention and attendant features.

Already Lynchburg is making ready to entertain the 7,000 or more visitors—men and women of the legion—who are beginning to come in even now in anticipation of the main guard, which will begin to arrive post by post Saturday night. The city will be theirs for four colorful days, as is amply indicated by a program laden with parades, banquets, a beauty pageant and a grand parade. Lynchburg is gay with bunting, the theme of which is a blending of the Stars and Stripes, the Tricolor and the State flag. Interspersed with the gayety, of course, will be business sessions of more or less import both within and without the organization.

Nothing Radical Expected.

As a general thing the Virginia Division is about as conservative and nonpolitical as any convocation of the kind could well be. For the most part it concerns itself with matters designed to promote the good of the order, with only occasional minor flares of extraorganization activities. In this respect it is markedly different from the National body, which commands always close attention from every section of the country. The speech here of Gen. Hines, of the Veterans' Administration, is expected to be along conventional lines. The State leaders who will furnish the other oratory are all far from the radical type.

But this is "election year," and the campaign to name representatives to the political show and enter more or less into every gathering of any size. Despite the fact that the Virginia situation has every appearance of being "in the bag," it is not at all unreasonable to suggest that the convention may inject itself by resolution or in some other fashion, characteristic of such conclaves, into the State's political painting.

Legion Largely Democratic.

Then, too, the legion is closely kin in this Commonwealth to the Young Democratic Club. The directorates, both male and female, are in some measure interlocking. In the club the women have equal membership privileges with the men and in the legion the Woman's Auxiliary is active and highly potent. The affairs of one are automatically and enthusiastically the affairs of the other. In the coming convocation, therefore, there lie political possibilities and potentialities which will not be overlooked by conscientious observers. The probabilities of their development along anything like revolutionary lines appear at this time to be remote, but something could happen at a moment's notice. For these reasons the meeting here will not be without its gallery of interesed spectators from all sections of Virginia.

It affords an excellent opportunity for mending fences in which there are weak places and of strengthening those who are apparently in good shape. So back of the fun and frolic one can but recognize the serious and important things which may arise in and result from this gathering of Virginia's veterans of the World War. In any circumstance, it will be a good show, with something to gain, perhaps, for the man who watches its performance, and nothing at all to lose by a four-day expenditure of time and observant faculties.

Staunton Restores City Chain Gang

Staunton, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The city council last night adopted a resolution to restore a city chain gang to work on municipal projects. Prisoners of the city jail will be put to work on street, park and other departmental jobs. The resolution was introduced by City Manager James C. Ruff.

In the event of any prisoner escaping from the gang he will, upon conviction, be given a term equal to the one he was serving when he made his escape, or if working out a fine he will be fined an amount equal to the original fine.

Lincoln Pearl Medal Contest.

Lincoln, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—A pearl medal contest is scheduled to be held at Lincoln Tuesday at 8 p. m. Contestants from Bloomfield, Round Hill, Purcellville and Lincoln will take part. Dr. J. Russell Smith, of Columbia University, will feature the program with a lecture on his recent cruise to Labrador.

Gala Welcome Awaits Ritchie Home-Coming

In the Meantime, His Rival, Dr. Conley, Is Indorsed by McMullen.

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Parades, airplane evolutions, the blare of bands and the cheers of thousands will welcome home Gov. Ritchie when he steps on Maryland soil next Thursday for the first time since he sailed for his vacation trip to France last July 11.

At least 50,000 persons are expected to gather at Mount Royal Station to greet the Governor upon his return here. Every Democratic club in the city will participate in the welcome, and the homecoming celebration is expected to exceed in impressiveness the fete which marked Gov. Ritchie's departure for Chicago in 1932 when he hoped to gain the Democratic nomination for the Presidency.

According to present plans, the Democratic marching clubs will start arriving at the station about 3 p. m. Thursday. Amplifiers will carry to the crowds the music of military bands. At 4:15 p. m. aerial bombs will be set off at 5-minute intervals. At 4:45 p. m. a squadron of National Guard airplanes will begin circling over the station, and at 4:52 p. m. the governor will descend from the train.

He will walk through the station to a platform in front of the station, where he will be presented to the crowd. Then speech-making will begin, following an invocation by Bishop Edward T. Helfenstein, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Maryland. Governor Ritchie's talk, to be broadcast by amplifiers and by radio, will mark the climax of the demonstration.

McMullen Indorses Dr. Conley.

Meanwhile breaking his political silence of nearly 15 years, Hugh A. McMullen, former state comptroller of Maryland, and a power in Democratic affairs in his home county of Allegany, has indorsed the gubernatorial candidacy of Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, the Baltimore American said today.

In 1920, Mr. McMullen was favored as the Democratic nominee for governor, to succeed Gov. Emerson C. Harrington, but the plans went awry when Albert C. Ritchie entered the field. During the past decade Mr. McMullen's opposition to the repeated candidacies of Governor Ritchie has been rumored, but the Cumberland leader never issued an open indorsement of any of Ritchie's opponents. Now, with Dr. Conley offering a real threat to the fifth term candidacy of Governor Ritchie, Mr. McMullen has bestowed his blessing upon the Frederick physician's campaign.

"Machine government is the antithesis of good government, and should be destroyed," Mr. McMullen said, referring to the political domination of Ritchie. "I feel that Charles H. Conley . . . is a citizen, who if nominated and elected, will serve the people acceptably, that he is capable of handling the intricate affairs of the State wisely and as a Marylander should.

"Dr. Conley comes from western Maryland, which has not been represented by the Democratic party in the governor's chair since the time of Gov. Hamilton. Dr. Conley is capable, positive in his honesty, and, I believe, impartial in his dealings with public questions."

Republican Candidate to Speak.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Harry W. Nice, seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination, will be the principal speaker at a mass meeting to be held at the State Armory here Thursday night.

Mr. Nice will be accompanied by Col. C. Wilbur Miller, candiate for the nomination for U. S. Senate; Frederick P. Adkins, Salisbury, candidate for the nomination for comptroller, and Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, Annapolis, candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals. State's Attorney J. Lloyd Harshman, a candidate for the State Central committee, will preside.

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—In announcing yesterday his withdrawal from the race for Democratic nomination for the chief judgeship of the First Judicial Circuit, Levin C. Bailey, of this city, issued a statement to the press in which he pledged his support to Benjamin A. Johnson, also a candidate subject to the Democratic primaries.

Mr. Bailey's withdrawal leaves Johnson and George H. Myers, of Princess Anne, the only Democrats for the chief judgeship, with Gordon Tull as the Republican candidate.

Pocomoke City, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—George H. Radcliffe, Democratic candidate for the Senate, is expected to visit Pocomoke City tomorrow. It is not expected that he will make any speeches, but will try to meet as many of the voters of Worcester County as possible.

Herbert R. O'Connor will speak at the armory tomorrow night as a guest of the Young Democrats Club of Worcester County. Mr. O'Connor will speak as a representative of the Ritchie faction of the Democratic party. At a later date Dr. Charles H. Conley will speak as a representative of the anti-Ritchie faction.

McDonald, 33, of 247 Twelfth street southeast, and Elmer L. Hurdle, 30, of Forestville.

Mt. Jackson Group Forms Garden Club

Mount Jackson, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Mrs. J. L. Meem has been elected president of the newly organized Mount Jackson Garden Club. Other officers are Mrs. C. M. Shannon, vice president; Mrs. L. F. Tisinger, secretary; Mrs. L. C. Haynes, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. O. B. Barnes, treasurer.

A membership committee composed of Mrs. C. M. Delp, chairman; Mrs. Jan Bird and Mrs. Shannon was named. Mrs. Frank Wissler and Mrs. W. B. Clark constitute the motto committee.

Thirteen charter members organized the club. Other members include Mrs. A. R. Evans, Mrs. James Shannon, Mrs. Robert Schilling, Mrs. W. W. Bird and Mrs. Frank Wissler, jr.

Farmers to Hear Hutchison.

Leesburgh, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—John R. Hutchison, director of extension service at Virginia Polytechnic Institution, is scheduled to speak at a meeting of farmers in Leesburgh High School auditorium Friday at 7:30 p. m.

Virginia Opens Public Schools Sessions Today

Curriculum Conference to Fix Future Trend of Instruction.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 26.—The future course of public school instruction in Virginia depends largely on the results of the six-day curriculum revision conference which opens tomorrow at the University of Virginia here.

Between 500 and 600 State educational officials, county and city superintendents, principals and teachers will gather to discuss new administrative and teaching methods along with the introduction of revised and newly designed materials for instruction.

Gov. Peery and former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle, of Roanoke, will both speak on tomorrow's program, preceding Dr. Charles G. Maphis, University of Virginia summer school dean, who will discuss the relation of the university to the public school curriculum.

Program to be Revised.

Sponsored by the State department of education under the direction of Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, the conference will review the experimental program conducted in secondary and elementary schools during the past several years, and assume some future course of action.

Dr. Hall tentatively plans to make the full adoption of the proposed change optional with the county and city superintendents.

The daily sessions will consist of special talks by curriculum authorities, panel discussions, and administrative, secondary and elementary group conferences.

Dr. Peters to Speak.

Following the introductory addresses tomorrow, Dr. D. W. Peters, director of instruction, State Department of Education, will speak on the evaluation of the tentative materials through classroom trial. Dr. Hall will discuss the possibilities of the Virginia State course of study as an aid to administrators in improving instruction.

Other speakers on the week's program include Prof. H. L. Caswell and Prof. Charles W. Knudsen, of George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.; Prof. R. L. Lyman, of the University of Chicago; Prof. J. Paul Leonard, of William and Mary College, and Dr. J. L. Manahan, of the University of Virginia.

The sessions will be presided over by Lucy Mason Holt, president of the Virginia Education Association; Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of Farmville Teachers College; Prof. W. R. Smithey, of the University of Virginia; Dr. K. J. Hoke, dean of William and Mary College; Dr. S. P. Duke, president of Harrisonburg Teachers College, and Dr. M. L. Coombs, president of Fredericksburg Teachers College.

Normal School Changes Staff

Promotions Announced at Teachers College in Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Appointment of George A. Kirby as instructor in commercial education at the State Teachers College at Fredericksburg, and promotions of three present staff members was announced yesterday by Dr. Morgan L. Combs, president

Miss Bertha Kirk, now associate professor of physical and health education, will head the department this fall. She replaces Miss Katherine Watson. Mrs. Nannie Morris Mae Williams, present acting registrar, has been named registrar and secretary to the president. Miss Nettie Tolliver will be secretary to the registrar.

Seven additions to the faculty will be made for the fall quarter in the departments of dietetics, commercial education, physical and health education, science, and education. Miss Annabell Merill and Miss Pearle M. Young were appointed to the faculty at the recent convention of the State board of education at Virginia Beach, Va.

The 1934-35 year will open September 24. Advance registration indicates a record enrollment, Dr. Combs said. Enrollment at the college has increased 55 per cent since 1929.

Front Royal Man Victim of Assault

Condition Held Critical; Suspect Jailed.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Harry Boyer, 45, Front Royal garage man, was in a critical condition in Memorial Hospital here tonight with a fractured skull, said to be the result of his having been struck by a former employe, Joe Washington, 51, colored, also of Front Royal.

From meager details it was gathered that Washington went to Mr. Boyer's garage and asked him for some money early today. Although Mr. Boyer refused the sum requested, he gave the colored man a small piece of money hoping that the latter would go away, Boyer's friends declared.

Instead of leaving the garage, Washington is said to have struck Mr. Boyer over the head with either a pipe or car axle. He then went to the Warren County Jail at Front Royal and sat on the steps until Sheriff Collins, learning of the affair, locked him up.

Shenandoah Bureaus to Meet.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The annual meeting of the Cooperative Bureaus of Shenandoah County will be held at the Shenandoah Fair Grounds Thursday, September 6. G. F. Holsinger, president of the State Farm Bureau, will be the principal speaker.

First Virginia Antique Show At Charlottesville Wednesday

State Is Being Combed for Old Furniture and Glassware.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—This historic city, which delights to bathe itself in the misty glamour of the olden days, is awaiting with keen interest the first Virginia antique show, which opens at Huntley Park Wednesday, under the auspices of the Charlottesville School for Boys.

The show, which continues through September 1, will be the first held in the South and the third in the United States.

With the Old Dominion's fertile store of show pieces, there will be no lack of exhibits, and the Tidewater, Richmond and Washington districts are being scoured to obtain the most authentic and famous collections.

The various displays are expected to show some of the finest examples of English and American furniture, Sandwich, South Jersey and Steigel glass, old Spode, Wedgwood, Bennington, Majolica, and Pennsylvania slip-ware; and old prints portraying American scenes.

Mrs. James Gordon Smith, of Greenwood, is chairman of the executive committee in charge of the show. Other members are Mrs. P. H. Faulconer, sr., and Mrs. W. A. Rinehart, of this city; Mrs. Pliny Fishburne, of Waynesboro; Mrs. Lemuel F. Smith, Mrs. Arthur W. Talcott, of Keswick; Mrs. Albert H. Morrill, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. William R. Duke, of Sunnyside, Albemarle County.

Mrs. Duke, chairman of the loan exhibit, is getting together a collection of fans, figurines, Staffordshire ornaments and dolls.

H. M. Gleason & Co., of this city, will make a "country store" exhibit of the 1850-60 period. Old counters will be used and visitors will be able to purchase those childhood goodies, licorice sticks, cinnamon drops, molasses kisses and wintergreen.

Mrs. J. Gordon Lindsay is chairman of the hostess committee. The hostesses will be dressed in old-fashioned costumes, once worn by Charlottesville and Albemarle County residents, loaned by local residents.

Allred Victory Held Assured In Texas Race

'Ma' Ferguson's Candidate Given Scant Chance of Overtaking Him.

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP).—The political star of the James E. Fergusons, dominant in Texas for 20 years, was eclipsed today by the ascendancy of smiling James V. Allred, destined at the age of 35 to succeed "Ma" Ferguson in the governorship.

Allred, called a "boy" by Ferguson and Tom F. Hunter, Ferguson-supported candidate for the governorship, held a lead of 48,000 votes tonight in the race for the Democratic nomination, tantamount to election.

Political observers conceded Hunter only a scant chance of overtaking Allred.

A tabulation by the Texas Election Bureau of the vote from Saturday's run-off primary gave Allred 476,280 votes, Hunter 428,333. This tabulation represented the vote from 243 of the State's 254 counties. With 141 complete, about four-fifths of the vote was believed accounted for.

The run-off primary brought the second setback this year to the Ferguson organization. C. C. McDonald, whom the Fergusons sponsored in the first primary, ran behind Allred and Hunter, neither of whom attained a majority that would have obviated the run-off.

James E. Ferguson was impeached and removed from the Governor's office in 1917. His wife, who ran on a vindication ticket, now is completing her second term. Both have announced they will retire from politics after the inauguration January 7.

3 Ships Unload Huge Ore Cargoes At Norfolk Port

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Norfolk, for the time being, is the greatest manganese ore port in the United States.

By tomorrow three ships will be discharging that commodity at the same time for the first time in the history of the port. A total of 21,200 tons will be put ashore here to be shipped by rail to Alloy, W. Va., where it will be used in the manufacture of manganese pigs.

The British steamer Kirkpool is now discharging 8,000 tons and the Norwegian ship Brentwood 5,800 tons at the tidewater terminals. Tomorrow the British steamer Maidenhead will arrive with 7,400 tons. The Kirkpool and Maidenhead loaded at Takoradi, West Africa, and the Benwood in Cuba. It will require 468 freight cars to transport the ore to Alloy.

Two Crash Deaths Held Unavoidable

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—A coroner's jury rendered a verdict unavoidable accident owing to heavy fog in the deaths of Edward Furst, 20, near Listonburg, Pa., and Clyde Falinger, 19, near Keyser Bridge, Garrett County, killed in a collision with a truck last night near Grantsville.

Claude Riley, 25, of Friendsville, and Raymond Falinger, 23, brother of Clyde Falinger, riding in the rumble seat, were injured. The truck was driven by Raymond Divine, of Friendsville, Md.

George Percy, 37, of this city, was killed when his car left the road near Grantsville and overturned yesterday. Percy, a native of Vermont, is survived by his wife.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Hee-Haw Calls on Blackie.

You won't have to go very far before you find him, if you start out to find a man who is all the time stumbling into bad luck. He will tell you that more bad things can happen to him than to anybody else in the world, and he will have a good time telling you about the last bad thing that happened to him, if you will just sit and listen to him.

But you wouldn't hear any such talk around Blackie's house if you visited him for a month. He and all of his friends believe that "it might have been worse," and he always says so when something that isn't very good happens to any of them. And they are always finding where two good things happen at the same time, and just fit into each other so as to make everything work out fine. And right here is one of those times:

"Just look at all this nice hay that has grown up between the peanut rows," Mrs. Man said to Mr. Man, when she went out to see how he happened to count six bags of peanuts where there were only five. "There isn't a bit of sense in letting it all go to waste, when it might feed Hee-Haw for days and days if you would turn him in on it at night when he doesn't have any work to do. Then you wouldn't have to give him any supper."

And that's how it "happened" that Hee-Haw wasn't shut up and locked in his house that night, but was turned out in the peanut field to eat grass and peanut vines for his supper and breakfast.

If you get in an awful hurry to get out to a ball game or to go to a party, it doesn't take you near all day to eat your breakfast or lunch, and if there is something that you want to do at night, and it will take till away after your regular bedtime to get through with it, you don't worry a bit about losing a little sleep. And it was just both of those ways with Hee-Haw last night.

Before it was dark he had eaten every bit of supper he wanted, and had worked his way down to the back of the field, and clear away from the house. And before his good folks had finished supper he had found a low place in the fence and had jumped over it and was trotting through the woods toward a mighty big tree where he expected to find some howdy, and to hear a lot of folksy talk, and maybe do a little bit of it himself.

So it just "happened" that soon after Blackie and the boys had finished supper, and were sitting out under the big maple tree that had dropped enough leaves on the ground to make about the prettiest carpet you ever saw, they heard a "plunk, plunk, plunk," coming down the hill, and there came Hee-Haw. You are just right when you think he got a lot of howdy, for he did. And that isn't all he got. Only that morning Jocko and Blackie had been talking about how much better that last lot of smoking tobacco was, and how they would like for Hee-Haw to get a pipe full of it. And you would have laughed almost as much as Hee-Haw did if you had seen the pipe that Jocko had made for him. He expected Hee-Haw to come again before very long, for it had been a long time since he had made them a visit, and he had made a pipe that was even bigger thna Blackie's.

He bored the pith out of the biggest corn cob there was in the lot that came from Mr. Man's house in the wagon, and grabbled down in the creek and pulled up a cane root as long as a yard-stick, and had made a stem for the pipe, and really it was a sight. And it was no wonder that Hee-Haw smoked it so hard that he wasn't near through telling them all he wanted to when the moon got so low that he said he must be going before it got so dark. Yes, he was in his field next morning, and Mr. Man doesn't know yet that he went visiting.

Leesburg Garden Club Sets Pageant Sept. 14

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The Loudoun County Hospital Garden will benefit from a flower show and pageant at the Thomas Balch Library here Friday, September 14, under the auspices of the Leesburg Garden Club. A pageant will portray fashions, old and new, under the direction of Mary Metzger and Sara Harrison.

Culbertson on Bridge

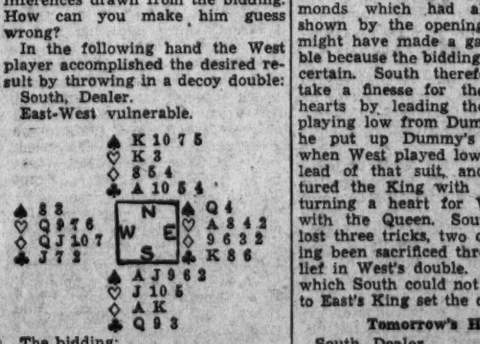
The Decoy Double.

George Bernard Shaw in one of his plays represents Julius Caesar, when a lieutenant wished to tell him something that must not be overheard, as opening all the doors and windows so that no one would think of listening. Though I am not convinced that this method would work in all cases, nobody can deny that Caesar had the right idea in trying to anticipate the mental processes of those he wished to outwit.

In Bridge, as in other branches of warfare, one is concerned with this problem of psychological anticipation. The Declarer, perhaps, will have to guess right in the matter of finessing. His guess, unless he is one of those Bridge morons who just guess, will be based on inferences drawn from the bidding. How can you make him guess wrong?

In the following hand the West player accomplished the desired result by throwing in a decoy double:

South, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



The bidding:

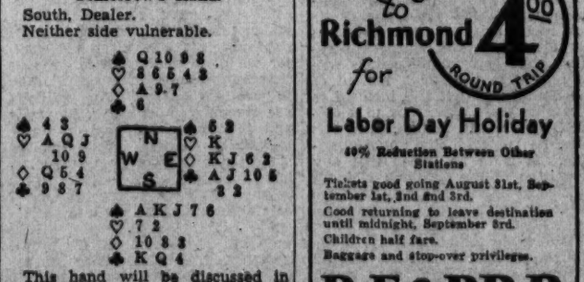
South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

The bidding is most illuminating. North's single raise on the first round indicates a maximum holding of 4½ playing tricks, with probably no outside biddable suit and thus fairly balanced distribution. South was unable to bid game immediately and consequently has not a very strong hand. The contract, therefore, must depend upon the success of one or two finesses. If West, with his very weak hand, can cause South to place the outstanding strength with him, whatever finesses there are will be taken toward East and one or two tricks may be gained, sufficient to defeat the contract.

To see how West's strategy worked, consider how South, trusting the inferences of the double, planned his play. The diamond Queen was opened and won by the King. Now South, with balanced distribution, would ordinarily have played for the drop in spades. But it seemed that West must have held at least the promise of a trump trick in order to double, so South first played the spade Ace and then finessed for the Queen to Dummy's K 10. Even when East gobbled up this trick with his Queen, South still had good grounds for believing the double. With the heart A Q, the club K J and the sequence in diamonds which had already been shown by the opening lead, West might have made a gambling double because the bidding sounded uncertain. South therefore did not take a finesse for the Queen of hearts by leading the Jack and playing low from Dummy; instead, he put up Dummy's heart King when West played low on the first lead of that suit, and East captured the King with his Ace, returning a heart for West to win with the Queen. South had now lost three tricks, two of them having been sacrificed through his belief in West's double. A club trick which South could not avoid losing to East's King set the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

190,000 Men In CCC Classes

Report for 4 Months of Current Period Shows Educational Work.

The value of the Civilian Conservation Corps plan as an educational force, as well as a part of the National recovery program, was pointed out yesterday by Clarence S. Marsh, educational director of the CCC, who revealed that 190,000 CCC men attended one or more of the classes in the forest camps during the first four months of the third six months' period beginning April 1, 1934.

The classes, covering high school, vocational, elementary and general subjects, were offered as part of the CCC educational program approved by President Roosevelt last winter, and have resulted in large reduction in the number of illiterates among the men, according to reports reaching Mr. Marsh's office.

In an interim report submitted to the War Department yesterday and forwarded to the office of Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, Mr. Marsh said: "The educational staff of the CCC is one of the largest in the world, with more than 7,500 people engaged in the work, approximately 5,000 of whom are volunteers, contributing part-time services by either conducting classes in camp giving lectures, or by teaching evening school classes in nearby schools."

Sentenced for Beating Woman.

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—William S. Taylor was sentenced to 14 months in the House of Correction after a hearing by Magistrate Leven H. Hall here yesterday, on a charge of beating Mable Taylor last night at her home here.

Radio Waves and Ripples

TWO real people you should know . . . Myrt and Marge, whom we met after their first day's stint at the Fox Theater.

Marge is sweet. Her brown eyes sort of get you. She loves to talk of stage folk, but most of all of her mother, who is Myrt, and one of the real veterans of the stage who has done everything from acrobatics to premiere chanteuse. Myrt had to eat. So one day, she says, "I have a sort of gift at putting things down on paper, so I wrote some script and showed it to our sponsors and the first thing we knew we were on the networks."

"Are you really mother and daughter," inquired a reviewer from the afternoon prints.

"I'll say we are. I remember the night she was born. Why we were——," said Myrt as her daughter stopped her just in time. Both will be back on the air from Chicago as the "chorus girls of the air" on October 1. This time it will be in the United States. Myrt, it seems, has been touring South America. "Gathering material," she says. You'll hear them both tomorrow from WJSV at 10:30 p. m.

CAUGHT Godfrey, the hennahaired wand waver of WJSV, just before he left for Miami and the Florida Keys. Art was playing dominoes with his secretary and signing checks just to make the banks Godfrey conscious.

He'll make straight for his hideout and try for tarpon. Due back on the air September 10, his Sun Dial will be taken over meanwhile by Warren Sweeney, the lad with the barrel chest, who also does the Moon Dial.

Big things are planned in the fall for Art. He'll still have his Gazette and further opportunity to break records. He and his pal Winchell have discussed tall things over tall glasses. Art plans to stooge for the New York columnist.

Lucy Monroe, lyric soprano, you've often heard in light opera over N. B. C. networks. She has been heard with Levitow's Ensemble Symphonique Mondays at 7:30 p. m.

LIONEL BARRYMORE, LIONEL BARRYMORE, ing tables with his cutlass and calling for rum, will go on the air this Wednesday, August 29, at 8 p. m., over N. B. C. networks to tell listeners what motion picture producers and distributors are doing to present constructive films.

Irene Dunne will go on with him and other Hollywood notables will be heard the following Wednesday and on the Friday afternoons of August 31 and September 7 at 2:30 p. m.

SERVICE bands play strident tones and listeners enjoy the blare while shaving. But way out in the rural fields, miles from here these stirring selections reach the ears of one fan who hears . . . and knows each member of the band by "touch."

Blind, this listener lives alone and his only amusement is his radio to which he listens all day.

Happening out there one day, Jim McGrath, N. B. C. announcer, was told by villagers that the sightless radio fan was eager to meet someone who knew all about that band. Jim immediately went to his cottage. With him he took a picture of the band just to refresh his memory in describing its members. Learning that an actual picture of his beloved band was before him, the blind man's face lit up.

"Put your finger on the trombonist," he ordered.

Doing so, the announcer pased the blind man's fingers over each member, describing his instrument, until both had memorized all the players.

Then Jim put round-headed pins in each player's position, so that his fellow band enthusiast could "feel" their exact spot in the picture.

Expelled From Germany.

If Germany had definitely decided to attract the attention of the world to its high-handed policies, it could have done nothing more appropriate to its purposes than expelling a correspondent of the standing of Dorothy Thompson. Her crime, it appears, was in interviewing Herr Hitler before he became chancellor and saying, in a disparaging tone, that he was not a Mussolini.

In her account of the incident, Miss Thompson (in private life Mrs. Sinclair Lewis) makes the pertinent point that any country has the right to expel those whom it finds inimical to its interests. There is no provision in any existing treaty by which the United States can protest the order for her to leave. Thus every accredited foreign newspaperman now in Germany who has written, or who may write, contrary to the wishes of the minister of propaganda may legally be ordered to depart at a moment's notice. Many correspondents are fearful that Germany is about to enforce more expulsions in its futile effort to suppress the real truth of what is happening in that sad land under the leadership of Adolf Hitler.

A stupidity which is hard to understand lies behind this policy. In Germany today are a number of fair-minded reporters intent upon sending news, and not propaganda, to their respective papers. If a general expulsion were to be ordered, the newspapers of the world would be forced to subterranean efforts to get news and the result obviously would be even less favorable to the Third Reich than the present dispatches are. An overbearing attitude toward the opinion of the rest of the world can not possibly redound to Germany's credit.

Miss Thompson makes another point which Germany refuses to consider. She states: "There is certainly a minority of Germans, and I think they are by no means the least thoughtful, patriotic and representative, who refuse [to identify the National Socialist party in all its phases and manifestations with Germany], and whose voice deserves to be heard in the world, if it can not be heard at home." This voice will be heard, regardless of what means Hitler may take to silence it. The dangerous precedent set up in the expulsion of Miss Thompson may some day become apparent to a government which thus far has blindly refused to consider any necessity of striving for a world understanding of its problems. No nation can indefinitely live to itself alone.

"Marked Down."

London's Scotland Yard appears to be a back yard as well as a front. According to Associated Press dispatches, this famous center of crime-suppression has determined to supplement its public activities by running a private police and detective employment agency, hiring out its guards and investigators to individual citizens on a schedule (which, of course, it pronounces "shedule") of fixed rates per hour and per day.

The renting of mere bobbies at $7.25 for an eight-hour shift may awaken no distress in the conservative British public and evoke no letters to the Times, lamenting the decay of Victorian traditions: after all, to paraphrase one "eminent Victorian," a cop is only a copper. But, still to paraphrase Mr. Kipling, a good "Yard detective" used to be a sleuth. He used to be above mere mercenary considerations, whereas now he is offered at $17 a day—less for part-time, with a minimum of $6.

It is all very well for the authorities to explain that they have "gone into trade" merely to slay the old "gratuities system" whereby C. I. D. agents have long "been employed in their spare time by private persons" at fluctuating figures. A disillusioned public will feel sure that it knows better. Seventeen dollars a day! Well, at least and at last Lestrade's worth has been officially appraised: the memory of Sherlock Holmes is justified.

An Alternative Investment.

Life insurance has become one of the bright spots in the economic spectrum. Sales of ordinary life insurance during the first seven months of this year show an increase of 15 per cent over the same period last year. The improvement was general in all sections of the country, although more marked in some localities.

To some extent this increased outlay for protection against the contingencies of life may reflect better economic conditions. But that does not appear to be a complete explanation. Like bank deposits, insurance sales are often augmented when other outlets for investment become involved in uncertainty. Some people with money to invest doubtless have turned from the stock market to life insurance. Probably others who customarily spend most of their incomes have become apprehensive of their future because of the accumulation of imponderable factors. The fact that insurance sales increased 30 per cent in the Rocky Mountain States, where the degree of recovery has not been marked, tends to support these assumptions.

Unfortunately, isolated signs of renewed activity do not always indicate general economic improvement.

Rising Tide Of Royalty.

In another column of today's Post, Lothrop Stoddard writes an excellent review of the royalist resurgence in Austria and provides an enlightening exposition of its historic background vis-a-vis Germany. He points out that "the clash between rival forms of Fascism and the grave condition of Hitlerized Germany" have eliminated the element of surprise from many a political adventure which would lately have been merely amazing, and have "put forward as serious possibilities" projects that "even a year ago, would have been dismissed as inconceivable." Yet he concludes that the ambition of Prince von Starhemberg "is probably a vain dream."

Possibly it is, but none may deny that the dream gains daily more and more dreamers—dreamers who, like the Austrian vice chancellor, are "vigorous men of action." Certainly, therefore, as Mr. Stoddard frankly demonstrates, the idea, while not to be taken too seriously, is not to be given a casual conge. Indeed, if one is to look beyond the immediate situation, there are important aspects of it upon which even Mr. Stoddard has not touched.

The Treaty of Versailles to the contrary notwithstanding, one form or another of Austro-German union now seems eventually inevitable. Here the ethical or unethical nature of that document's provisions is not in practical debate. The question is one of politics and political economy, of racial and lingual ties and of the elder traditional Teutonic loyalties. It is a question of irresistible tendency, of what is almost surely some day bound to be.

Mussolini's efforts to keep Austria detached from her northern neighbor by an Austro-Italian union are little short of futile. They blindly ignore the century old, but never forgotten, occupation of northern Italy. They take into consideration nothing from the World-Wartime collapse of the Triple Alliance—a collapse effected by Italy herself. The prejudices engendered by these events endure, whereas, because of a family relationship, the Austro-Prussian animosities are forgotten. On the one hand, there is a separation of race and language made wider by inimical memories; on the other, there is a natural approach accentuated by economic needs and political requirements.

Whether the alliance of Austria with Germany be made on a basis of German supremacy, of Austrian supremacy, or of forthright equality, it would be rash to predict. Whether the world will see a loose federation or a common and centralized government, nobody can surely say. But this much is plain: that the Hapsburg-dynastic dream of Prince von Starhemberg and his allies is no more fantastic than the actual situation at the present moment in Austria—in Hungary, too—and in Germany.

Judgment Vindicated.

At the end of a long controversy over location of an adult tuberculosis hospital for the District, the PWA is again confronted by the original proposition. Will it advance funds for the construction of the proposed hospital at Glenn Dale, Md.? When the District Commissioners asked for a PWA loan to finance this project no other site was seriously considered. The District owns the site at Glenn Dale. It has already constructed there a tuberculosis sanitarium for children. Location of the adult institution on some distant site, thus increasing the initial cost and operating expenses, would be obviously absurd. Yet two special committees, the last one appointed by the President, were necessary to override Secretary Ickes' plan of locating this hospital in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

In making its report in favor of Glenn Dale, the President's committee of experts emphasizes the same obvious arguments that were presented to Secretary Ickes in the first place. What is most important in the treatment of tuberculosis, it says in effect, is a change of environment permitting rest, freedom from anxiety, good food and unpolluted air. It advances the opinion of some experts that altitude is not effective in the treatment of tuberculosis unless it is more than 3,000 feet. "There is no such site available near Washington," the committee says.

Location of the proposed hospital in the mountains, the committee found, would have added greatly to its expense, would have made it relatively inaccessible to specialists whose services are frequently needed in such institutions, and would have removed many patients beyond the reach of relatives and friends who often have an important influence upon their recovery. In short, the committee concluded that none of the mountain sites considered offer "anything which would outweigh the many advantages of Glenn Dale." Not a single factor was brought forward to impugn the original good judgment of the District Commissioners in choosing this site.

This outcome of the controversy is especially gratifying because of the PWA's inclination to encroach upon the prerogatives of the District government. Experts have put that agency in the position of delaying a local project by petty objections. In the circumstances the $1,500,000 needed for the tuberculosis hospital ought to be forthcoming without more ado.

"The '93 Follies."

Everybody was tremendously thrilled when Dr. O. Koblic announced that he had discovered "Element 93, the heaviest of all earth's basic materials," although not one of us enthusiasts in a hundred knew what a basic material was. Nor would we be the happier if we did know. On Thursday, however, the honest doctor retracted his claim, admitted that, thanks to spectroscopic analysis, the supposed "big brother of uranium," which he extracted from Czechoslovakian pitchblende, was proved to be mere silver tungstite—and, whereas few of us would recognize silver tungstite if we found it in the sugar-bowl, we are now quite as pleased as we were formerly awed.

For some obscure reason or other, any demonstration of the fallibility of science always gratifies the humble heart of man. Perhaps because science correct is just too impeccable for him, science in error proves a joy. So he makes light of "the heaviest of all earth's basic materials." He chants with the children:

"Heavy, heavy,
What hangs over?"

He declares that, if Dr. Koblic really wants to discover "the heaviest of all earth's basic materials," the place for him to seek it is not Czechoslovakia; the place for him to look for it is a novel by Theodore Dreiser.

A Changing Objective?

Measures which are being taken at Manila as a result of the independence act are almost amusing. For years the Filipinos have been struggling to free themselves from Yankee control. Now that independence is within their grasp they are trying to draw closer to the United States. The latest move is toward increased tariff preferences for American exports to the islands with the view of perpetuating free trade.

An article by Vicente Albano Pacis, published a few days ago by The Post, pointed out that both Gov. Murphy and Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine Senate, have urged the legislature to increase the tariff protection for American goods. In this country friends of the Philippines have been following just the opposite course. They have insisted that independence would be an illusion unless it could be accompanied by some measure of economic stability that would not be based upon free exports to the United States. Consequently, gradually increasing duties on Philippine goods were written into the independence act with the view of encouraging Philippine trade with other nations.

The inclination of the Filipinos to cling to the American market, in spite of this attitude in Congress, is especially interesting because of the expansion of Japanese trade within the islands. With the aid of depreciated currency, cheap labor and an intense selling campaign, Japanese goods are making inroads in many markets. The Philippines seem to offer an especially attractive outlet, from the Japanese point of view, because of the ease with which Japanese merchants undersell American goods. But the Filipinos are somewhat alarmed at the Japanese ambition to win their trade. Instead of welcoming this opportunity to lessen their dependence upon this country, the leaders at Manila advocate higher tariffs against Japan and more concessions for America.

Of course, the strongest reason for this anomalous movement is the Filipino desire to have the export quotas and taxes eliminated from the Tydings-McDuffie act. The politicians at Manila have set out to do a favor before asking one. Apparently they are not impressed by the inconsistency of trying to strengthen economic ties between the two countries while political ties are being severed. That confusion of purpose is nevertheless grave. It suggests that what the Filipinos really desire is something less than independence in the full meaning of that word. As the struggle between the forces of separation and free trade continues a new objective may be evolved, and the final outcome may be quite different than that which Congress visualized.

Filming Dickens.

According to advance reports the "film version" of Charles Dickens' "Great Expectations" will be as technically correct as 11 months of intense historical research can make it. This is well, for if there is any English author whose minutiae has been as closely studied as his, it is only Shakespeare. Throughout the world exist a number of Dickens Societies, the main purpose of which seems to be the study of costumes and customs of the times of which he wrote.

Sometimes it seems as if the "Dickens lovers," as they call themselves, subordinate the great and human implications of his stories to the little details, in the description of which he was a past master. Were the film makers to have slipped up, as they almost did, in the costume of the convict Magwitch, it is certain that a hundred Dickensites would have roared a protest that in 1845 convicts bore numbers on their backs but their clothes were not marked with the "broad arrow."

Technical direction of motion pictures, especially those which, like "Great Expectations," deal with another day than our own, is one of the most fascinating tasks in Hollywood. In the past the movies received widespread condemnation for their disregard of historical or antiquarian facts. But today it is the rare picture which exhibits any gross diversion from accuracy. Costumes, furnishings, even such things as the hinges on doors, are now reproduced with almost painful exactness. This adds to the authenticity of the film, and sometimes to its artistic merit.

In "Great Expectations," we are told, this passion for fidelity goes beyond hinges and hairdressing. The dialogue is Dickens' own for the greater part, and even the sequences are as they appeared in the book. In this it differs from one of the best films of the year, "One More River." A minor part of Galsworthy's book was chosen for filming; much of the dialogue was made especially for the film. But the settings were well chosen and the characters were Galsworthian to the T. The excellent results obtained in this case suggest that absolute fidelity to the original book is not necessary to a correct simulation of an author's creed and style.

Will the true Dickens flavor be in the new film, with its utter faithfulness to the right costume and words? Or does that flavor come more from acting, interpretative direction and photography? Usually art in its faithfulness to the author's spirit trnscends any dependency upon the minor details of time and place.

Regulation of the Stock Exchanges

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Dr. Tugwell, the well-known leader of the "Brain Trust" school of government, has been touring the country at the taxpayers' expense, extolling to farmers and others the great merit of a "managed economy" program. Before we blindly accept this gentleman's utterances as statements of fact, it would be but the part of wisdom first to examine the results of the program which he advocates in the fields in which it already has been tried. Particularly should this inquiry be made now, before the grain and commodity markets of our country are smothered by the same sort of "benefits" which Federal control has heaped in such generous measure upon our security markets.

In February of this year, before the Fletcher-Rayburn bill to regulate the stock exchanges was introduced into the Congress, the market value of all stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange was in excess of 37 billions of dollars. A relatively small part of this huge total was in the hands of brokers. The larger part was owned by thrifty citizens in every walk of life. Their money, invested in these stocks, had provided the capital for our country's development, had furnished employment for millions of workers and had provided a back-log of security for the future for many American families.

Our National Administration, magnifying to a size all out of proportion to reality the evils which occur in some degree in every large business, popularized the issue of regulation of security exchanges. Next, upon a written request of the President for a bill "with teeth in it," the "Brain Trust" wrote a drastic measure to control the trading in securities and it was presented to Congress.

Fortunately, the terms of the proposed act were softened somewhat before final passage, but only after the most strenuous efforts on the part of the organized security interests of the Nation. These men, fortified by the knowledge that only experience can provide, well knew what the "Brain Trust" refused to recognize, viz, that too much regulation destroys markets and that great economic loss inevitably follows interference with free trade.

Over their protests, however, and over the protests of many other farseeing business men, the security exchange act, in revised but severe form, was passed on June 6. The passage of this act marked a great victory for the "Brain Trust" and the adherents of a "managed economy."

What has happened to the security markets meanwhile? Stocks that were worth over $37,000,000,000 in February were worth slightly more than $33,000,000,000 on June 1, a decline in value of more than $3,500,000,000. Nor can this shrinkage in value be dismissed lightly. It has occurred during a period when business reports from all sections of the country were indicating general gains.

The "Brain Trust" carefully has avoided mentioning this impairment of our National wealth, but it is worthy of more than passing notice that this shrinkage of security values was forecast very definitely by men who were well qualified by experience to speak with authority upon the subject. Likewise, it is apparent that those engaged in the business of trading in securities were not the only ones to sustain this economic loss.

The savings and investments of salaried men and of wage earners suffered far more. With the decline in value of their reserve funds, representative of the thrift of men and women in every walk of life, the current spending of many millions of people has contracted. Thus has this unwise measure affected many other millions of people who not even yet have realized its far-reaching scope.

Scheduled for the next session of Congress is another measure of similar import, differing from the Stock Exchange act only in that it is designed to afford the grain exchanges and commodity markets of the Nation the same sort of "benefits" which have been thrust upon the stock exchanges and upon security holders by this last Congress.

Upon whom will these "benefits" weigh most heavily? The grain trade will suffer, of course, as speculative trade will dwindle. Speculative activity can not thrive when there is interference with a free and open market. This business will seek a market for its funds where they can be employed as the judgment of their owners may decide, free from restrictions and recognizing the law of supply and demand as the arbiter of prices and values.

The farmer will suffer far more. Just as the security owner, who produced the wealth that purchased a security, has suffered from interference with the security markets, so will the farmer, who produces grains and commodities, suffer from interference with his markets.

The grain exchanges of this country already stagger under too great a load of Government regulations and yet more interference with markets now is threatened. The market price of grains and commodities, which is the measure of their worth to the producer as long as he produces more than he can consume himself, varies directly with the freedom of the marketing operation. Interference lowers values.

This is well illustrated in the marketing of the new crop of wheat. Of the three most active of the world's grain markets, Liverpool, with a minimum of government control, has suffered least. Winnipeg, with government activity restricted to the operation of a pool, has fared next best. The Chicago Board of Trade, the world's largest market for grain, harassed by a mass of regulation and legislation, has shown the greatest decline from top prices since the new crop movement began. Our producers fared the worst of the three.

The processing tax on pork products impeded that market. The producer of beef cattle, free of this "benefit" of Government and "managed economy," has enjoyed a much more gratifying relative prosperity as a return for his effort to supply a needed product for consumption. It would be well also to remember the experience of Brazil with the coffee market.

It should be more widely recognized by all of us that we have an identical interest in these matters. Producers, distributors and consumers are all in the same boat. Interference with the functions of anyone is bound to react to the injury of all. There is only one kind of prosperity that properly can be called real prosperity and that is the prosperity of all. Prosperity for one class at the expense of the others does more harm than good, even to the extent of injuring those who enjoy the temporary prosperity.

As Others See It

The Color Line in Sports

The Springfield American Legion junior baseball team, champions of New England, went to Gastonia, N. C., to play in the Eastern regional series, taking along as a member Erny "Bunny" Taliaferro, Negro and ace pitcher-outfielder. It returned home without touching a ball, Manager Sidney Harris having withdrawn the team from the championship because of the hostile treatment by the Gastonians not only of Taliaferro but of all the members of the Northern team. The colored boy was refused accommodations in the hotel, the members of the team were hooted in the streets, and the management was unable to guarantee that the visitors would not be mistreated if they attempted to play. Manager Harris acted wisely, both in the avoidance of physical violence on the ball grounds, which seemed imminent, and as a protest against the inhospitable reception by the Gastonians.

Such incidents are exceedingly regrettable, although not unprecedented. This one recalls a similar one of many years ago, when Robert T. Teamoh, a colored reporter on one of the Boston papers and also a member of the Legislature, visited Virginia, along with other members of a legislative committee who had gone South on official business. Teamoh was not molested and, in fact, he was received with the others at the executive mansion by that fine Southern gentleman, Gov. O'Ferrall. The Southern papers blazed over the incident and it injured if not defeated the Governor politically. Hot disputes ensued over the ethics of the episode, turning on the question whether Teamoh, notwithstanding his official position, should have waived the courtesies of the mansion, or the Governor, despite his position, should have refused to admit him, in deference to Southern sentiment. The point never was settled satisfactorily, probably never will be.

Our neighbor, the Springfield Republican, fears that some National reverberations may come of the Taliaferro incident. An effort is being made, with the backing of the Massachusetts legionnaires, to enter the Springfield team in a competition with the East and West sectional winners at Chicago in a three-team play-off. If a Southern team should be a competitor in the finals, an awkward situation might arise, because it may be taken for granted that the Springfield management will not yield one of its best men in deference to Southern prejudice, and the Southern players, unless because the games will be played in the North instead of the South, may not feel inclined to lay aside their objections to a colored player even though, as in this case, he is personally unobjectionable. It is to be hoped that any repetition of the Gastonia incident will be avoided. Such collisions are exceedingly rare, and no point is gained when prejudice is allowed to take the place of courtesy. If the affair were in the political instead of the baseball field, very much might be lost.

No Work?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mrs. Norman Mack declares that we do not know what work is. Well, there are about ten millions of us who do not know what work is, for the (un)reason that we can not get jobs.

Even in so-called times of prosperity, many of us are compelled to be idle, since the bosses can not sell at a profit the products of the labor of all of us. Under this topsy-turvy capitalistic system, we produce, not for the benefit of the many, but in the vain attempt to satiate the greed of the few. Millions starve, not on account of the insufficiency of the harvests, but because we have no money with which to buy. Millions are in rags, not through lack of cotton and wool, for we plow under the cotton and reduce the number of sheep in order to "create a market." And millions are sleeping in hallways, in parks and in automobiles, and in other makeshift shelters, while houses stand tenantless, for landlords must have their rent.

When shall we awaken and educate and vote ourselves into socialism? Under that system we shall produce for use and not for profit, and there will be abundance for all with no exploitation by the few.

The Post Impressionist

The Kaiser Conundrum.

Postoffice, Monday.

AFTER 20 years of "debunking," the biographic pendulum swings back toward Tom Sawyer's whitewash bucket. Ever since Strachey died, the curve of his imitators has been declining from irony. Now it mounts the opposite side of the circle. And J. Daniel Chamier writes "Fabulous Monster" (Longmans, Green & Co.) in vindication of the last—or latest—German Kaiser.

• • • •

Certainly no figure of our time has suffered such extremes of flattery and condemnation as Friedrich Wilhelm Viktor Albert von Hohenzollern. But——

"'What is truth?' asked jesting Pilate, and waited not for an answer."

• • • •

Born to a recent, carefully wrought grandeur Wilhelm entered life with physical defects—not to say mental—which deeply disappointed his parents and their court. He had a withered arm. He is said to lack, both literally and figuratively, an epidermis. Worst of all, his temperament proved so hysterical as sometimes to brush the fringe of madness. Yet he was "hardened;" he was trained, and cruelly trained, to overcome these handicaps—all three actually, the second metaphorically as well. Let him be what he might, he must become, or must be made, the Perfect Prussian Prince.

What could his childhood be if not ugly and unhappy?

But the Potsdam authors of his Cyropaedia won. In the end, they won his assistance, weakened his dormant, yet dogged resolution, aroused, in fine, his enthusiasm. Indeed, they roused a good deal more than they dreamed of arousing.

"The happy, hard-working, clean-living young man who could ride his critics to grief and walk them to a standstill, who was never seen tired, who had gone almost teetotal to discourage hard drinking in mess, who scorned even the dentist's terrors—'the ladies like an anaesthetic, no doubt'—who found his pleasures in sport . . . the sea and the forest, and had produced seven children in lawful wedlock, was not every one's idea of a congenial cripple with tendencies to insanity."

Thus our partisan biographer puts it. Yet doesn't he put it a bit too strongly? This patented paragon of the rational was that ruler who, dropping Bismarck, "dropped he pilot," who gave out the disastrous Daily Telegraph interview, who either swept the world into the World War or allowed himself to be swept into it (have that your own way) and who—abdicated.

Of Bismarck, Wilhelm has said: "I used to think, 'I do hope the great chancellor will live a long while, for, if I had him to rule me, I should be safe.'" This, however, was while the prince saw the Chancellor as nearly 20 years junior to somewhat overbearing Grandfather Wellhelm I. When Bismarck began to appear as 44 years Wilhelm II's senior the statesman was wished good-by.

• • • •

Three very elderly chancellors succeeded the elderly Bismarck! Only then did Wilhelm choose one whose age was scarcely a decade above his master's; and, although the Kaiser has written, "I let Bernhard (von Bulow) do it all," the imperial impulsiveness finally manifested itself in the Telegraph interview with its bid for British friendship which the German people so much resented. According to our present author, and contrary to accepted opinion, the Emperor didn't act without official advice, but it would appear that those who advised him as he wanted to be advised were made to pay uncommon dear.

Thereafter, Germany marched straight toward war. Mr. Chamier himself seems to succeed in presenting only a Kaiser so illogical as to think he could court conflict without encountering it—in showing us a man, moreover, more and more unstable:

"To live with Wilhelm von Hohenzollern and take him literally was enough to shatter any nerves . . . The satellites revolved round the sun of majesty, wondering what on earth made it buzz so, whether it was going to explode, and why it sometimes went round the other way. Sometimes it shot right up in the air, and they were terrified lest it should come down in the wrong place; and now and then there was a loud bang, and then nothing would persuade them that they had not been hit by a live shell."

• • • •

Mr. Chamier does his best for his imperial subject in the pages dealing with the World War—avers that the Kaiser's efforts toward peace injured his popularity with his army. But this defense seems scarcely a defense of Wilhelm's intelligence. Thus, shown Serbia's reply to Austria's ultimatum, Wilhelm, referring to Baron Giesl, Vienna's Minister to Serbia, writes: "Every reason for war drops away, and Giesl might have stayed quietly . . . On the strength of this, I should never have ordered mobilization!"—yet at that moment the Hohenzollern's ally and friend Franz-Josef was making peace im possible.

• • • •

Says Mr. Chamier: "Had Wilhelm survived as ruler even of a ruined Germany into the postwar world, his whole past history guaranteed that he would have thrown himself heartily into the new ideas of world-union." Probably he would. He threw himself into most things and never any way save energetically. But this is not to say that he was not warlike or that he was well-balanced: not even a little mad—but not well-balanced. The author who wants to answer the Kaiser conundrum will have to dig deeper than Mr. Chamier in that sad Berlin boyhood and that cruel Potsdam past.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

The Youth Movement.

BARGERON.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark—Dear Aleck: As I sit in front of the Hotel d'Angleterre enraptured by the quiet beauty of this city, what do I see but the Youth Movement right there before my eyes. Every country has one nowadays, Aleck. Everywhere the colleges have been doing something to them. It is an intrusion upon my happy perspective, Aleck; one that annoys me no little. I am inclined to ask testily, as if awakened rudely from a happy reverie, "Well, what is it they want now?"

The Socialist government has for several years been at work, Aleck, shaping that perfect state of which we hear so much, and insofar as my observation (necessarily casual) goes, it has done a good job.

It has instituted old-age pensions, unemployment protection and for some time has been effecting a division of the big land holdings. Under the land division scheme tenant farmers are permitted to purchase tracts on a very easy installment plan. Nearly all, if not all, of the big privately owned show-places have been opened to the general public. Reforms of all sorts are still in the making.

Within the very exclusive walls of the Yacht Club I found considerable complaint about what has been done, but an attitude of acceptance. The shoulder shrugs, and they were about the height of the dissatisfaction, came more upon the matter of high taxes in the "city" than upon the division of the large estates. The high taxes in the city, I gathered, are but another way of expressing high taxes upon the rich.

To avoid these taxes many of the wealthy have closed their town places and moved to the country. Too bad.

On the part of both those of the Yacht Club and of the hotel attendants and taxi drivers with whom I talked, however, there was agreement that the worker and the farmer have been considerably helped, that there is little if any real poverty in Denmark now.

The Yacht Club crowd said only nominal prices had been paid for the land taken over, while the workers insisted good prices had been paid. Whichever is right, it would seem that the wealthy got stuck, because they pay the taxes with which the government in turn takes over the land.

The main thought I got, however, was that the workers seemed perfectly satisfied and the wealthy acquiescent.

• • • •

Then, just as I was thinking that socialism was not so bad if it could effect such reforms without any trouble, with one side satisfied and the other inclined to go along, what should I hear but the "Internationale" raised by about 25 lusty young throats. Past the hotel they swept, Aleck, walking so swiftly that one got the impression they moved in vehicles, with big red flags.

They were simply boys and girls, Aleck, not a one more than 20 years of age but everyone with that fanatical look of devotion to their cause.

What, I wondered, can be their demand in a state so well advanced in socialism. Perhaps, they don't want to pay anything for the estates that are divided up. Just what is it they want that the Socialist government without any really serious opposition, has not been accomplishing or is still accomplishing? Are they just rearing for bloodshed? Do they after all, know what they really want?

It is hard to tell, Aleck, but the thought struck my mind that I know what the youth movement needs. It needs a spanking, that's what it needs.

• • • •

The footman at the hotel assured me that communism has made no dent here. It was the first time the Communists had paraded in three months, he avowed. We returned to our discussion of socialism.

"Does not your Mr. Roosevelt intend to divide up the big estates?" he asked.

Just then Mr. Vincent Astor, ashore with a party of guests from his yacht, the Nourmahal, on which Mr. Roosevelt has cruised, came into the hotel. Mr. Astor's wealth is mostly in New York tenements.

I replied to the footman:

"It is difficult to say what Mr. Roosevelt intends to do."

Ousted Credit Man Demands Hearing

Former Corporation Head Asks Specific Charges.

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Demanding the airing of specific charges against him, George H. Stevenson, of Charles County, ousted president of the Production Credit Corporation of Baltimore, last night telegraphed the board of directors of the organization.

Mr. Stevenson said the real reasons for his dismissal have never been revealed, except for unconfirmed reports of his lack of cooperation with the Farm Credit Administration.

"In view of the importance of the position which I held, and the loyalty with which I have executed the duties of the office, I am in all fairness entitled to a presentation of specific charges and an opportunity to be heard thereon," he wired.

J. K. Doughton, former general agent of this district, has been named president of the corporation to succeed Mr. Stevenson.

Sick Austria Dreams Of Annexing Germany

Hope of Restoring Northern States as Vassals of a Revived Hapsburg Dynasty Counters Nazi Effort to Rule the South.

By Lothrop Stoddard.

TRANSITION times, like politics, make strange bedfellows. Not only do new ideas appear; old notions likewise come to the surface. This bizarre mingling of old and new was vividly illustrated by the nationalistic mania which swept Europe and the Near East at the time of the Versailles Peace Conference. Evoked by the magic formula of self-determination, fragments of peoples well-nigh forgotten by the world at large emerged from historic oblivion brandishing claims to full-fledged nationhood. Even the "devil-worshiping" Yezidis of Syria and the Assyrian Christions of Irak and Persia demanded the right to sovereign independence.

The current crisis in Central Europe is producing a situation similar in character, though with different slogans. The clash between rival forms of Fascism and the grave condition of Hitlerized Germany render the future of Europe's middle zone fluctuating and uncertain. It is, therefore, not surprising to discover that projects are being put forward as serious possibilities which, even a year ago, would have been lightly dismissed as inconceivable. One of the most curious of these schemes is that known as Austrian Imperialism.

That poor little postwar Austria, the chronic invalid of Central Europe, should be even proposed as the nucleus for a grandoise scheme of empire, may seem at first sight unbelievable. Yet so it is. The present rulers of Austria are apparently seeking to resurrect the historic Hapsburg claims, not over the Danube Valley, but rather to a position of primacy in Germany itself. Countering Nazi efforts to absorb Austria into the Third Reich, they now propose a reversion to that loosely federalized Germany, including Austria, which existed before Bismarck forged his "Second Reich" by expelling Austria from the Germanic federal body in 1866.

Clutching at Germany Avoids Foreign Barbs.

PRINCE VON STARHEMBERG, the most dynamic personality in Austria today, is a curious combination of romantic dreamer and vigorous man of action. The scion of a famous noble house, he recalls the role played by his ancestors when Imperial Austria dominated Central Europe. Like his colleague, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, Prince Starhemberg longs for a return of the Hapsburg dynasty to Vienna, and, if possible, to the throne of Hungary as well.

Yet these ardent monarchists are not without some sense of reality. They apparently recognize that a restoration of the Austro-Hungarian Empire as it existed before the great war is impossible. The vigorous states of the Little Entente would never consent to disappear or subside into insignificance; neither would Italy permit the revival of its old enemy.

However, argues Starhemberg, though the Danube route be closed, there is another path which would encounter no such insurmountable obstacles and which might even gain powerful foreign approval. That path leads northward into Germany.

In order to appreciate what Prince Starhemberg and his colleagues have in mind, we should recall the historic connection between Austria and Germany. During the Middle Ages, both countries, together with most of central Europe, were included in that strange political creation known as the Holy Roman Empire. And, toward the close of the Middle Ages, the Hapsburg rulers of Austria grew so powerful that they became Holy Roman emperors as a matter of course. Though this loose-knit empire contained many local severigns, none could compare in power or prestige with the Austrian Hapsburgs.

Prussia's Humbled Rival Strives to Rise Again.

GRADUALLY a rival arose in north Germany. This was the Hohenzollern dynasty of Prussia. As time passed, Prussia became the natural leader of the Germanic North, while Austria headed the Germanic South. The temperamental differences between north and south Germans are proverbial, and the differences coincide with religous lines, north Germany being mainly Protestant, whereas Austria and most of South Germany are Roman Catholic.

The first big test of strength between Austria and Prussia came with the wars waged between Frederick the Great and the Austrian empress, Maria Theresa. This struggle was indecisive. Prussia confirmed its predominance over North Germany, but Austria retained its ascendancy over the South. The boundary between the two spheres of influence ran roughly through central Germany along the line of the river Main.

The antiquated Holy Roman Empire vanished during the turmoil of the Napoleonic wars and Germany emerged into the nineteenth century as a loose political federation under the rival controls of a still powerful Austria and a Prussia further strengthened in prestige and territory. The rivals intrigued against each other continually. As late as 1850 an ambitious Austrian statesman, Prince Schwartzenberg, tried to get the South German States to join Austria in a war against Prussia, hoping thereby to revive the old Austrian ascendancy over all Germany. In order to transform the ramshackle Germanic confederation into a strong, unified nationality, Bismarck fought Austria in 1866. He also had to fight the South German States, which held to their traditional Austrian allegiance. Prussia's victory resulted in the German empire proclaimed in the hour of triumph over France in 1871. But from this new Germany, Austria was excluded. Therefore German nationhood was achieved only by keeping out one important branch of the German folk.

Minority Sees Anschluss As Fatal to Austria.

THIS sundering of historic ties has been deplored on both sides of the frontier. Ever since 1866, many Austrians have hoped to reunite with their kinsmen of the Reich. Before the war, these partisans of reunion were known as Pan-Germans. It was under their influence that Adolf Hitler grew up and acquired his All-German ideals. However, in those prewar days, most Germanic Austrians prided themselves on their position as the ruling race of the Hapsburg empire, and this dynastic loyalty claimed their primary allegiance.

The smash-up of the Hapsburg empire in the great war radically altered the situation. The Austrian Germans were now an impoverished remnant placed in an impossible economic situation. Ever since the war, most Austrians would unquestionably have voted to join Germany if union had not been forbidden by the peace treaties, backed by the resolute veto of the victorious Allied Powers.

Yet there remained in Austria a minority, numerically small, but influential and with foreign backing, which retained its dynastic loyalty to the Hapsburgs and which dreamed of restoring the Hapsburg empire in one form or another. This minority is opposed to union with Germany on principle, since "anschluss" would spell the disappearance of Austria as a self-conscious political entity.

New Fear of War-Like Germany Bars Union.

THE acute crisis precipitated by by a Hitlerized Germany has been the opportunity of these Hapsburg partisans. Fear of an aggressive, militarized Germany has not only stiffened opposition to Austro-German union in many parts of Europe. It has also led to much speculation on how such a Germany could best be checkmated. This is notably true of France. Ever since the war, many Frenchmen have insisted that the ascendancy of Prussia over Germany must be destroyed, and that the best way to do this would be to bring about a reversion of Germany to some form of loose federalism akin to that before 1866.

That, however, is essentially the idea of Starhemberg and his colleagues, who are obviously angling for French support to their dream of restoring the Hapsburgs by offering to revive Austria's historic role as opponent of Prussia. With Germany in the grip of an economic crisis threatening dire internal consequences, the Austrian legitimists are encouraged to seek French backing for a revived Imperial Austria which, at an opportune moment, might strike to undo the work, not merely of Hitler, but of Bismarck as well.

All this is probably a vain dream. The ordeal of the great war, borne so heroically by all Germans against a hostile world, seems to have cemented German unity as never before. Yet this revival of an old imperialistic ideal by a handful of romantic legitimists in Austria is highly intriguing. It likewise reveals the parlous state of flux into which Central Europe is sinking today.

Cambridge Boy Scouts Plan Rodeo Next Month

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The two Cambridge Bay Scout troops are arranging to hold a rodeo as the opening event of their fall activities, and will invite troops living in nearby towns. The competition will be held on either the campus of the Cambridge High School or the grounds of the Cambridge Seminary in September.

A partial list of events includes troop entry, oath and laws, tug of war, wall scaling, first aid, barrel tilting, signaling, sack race, archery, antelope race, tent pitching contest, relay race, bucket brigade, blindfold battle royal and campfire.

Proctor Rites Held At Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Funeral rites for James Proctor, 72, well-known resident here who died yesterday after an illness of three weeks, were held this afternoon.

Mr. Proctor was a native of Orange County. Surviving are his widow and four children, E. E. Proctor, of Toledo, Ohio; Hunter M. Proctor, of Alexandria, Va.; James E. Proctor, of this city, and Mrs. George Fetter, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Feed, Live Stock Surveyed by U. S.

Virginia Farmers Are Sent Schedules on Needs.

Richmond, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The United States Government is making a National survey this month to determine the amount of feed available and the amount needed to winter livestock.

Schedules are being mailed to farmers throughout the country. In Virginia 5,000 farmers have been sent these schedules by the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service.

The schedule has questions on the amount of grain and hay now on farms carried over from 1933 or previous crops, and on the estimated production of feed crops this year. In order to estimate feed available this winter, farmers are asked to report the amount already fed or sold, and the quantity that will be available for sale. The schedule also asks the number of livestock on farms, the number which will be sold or slaughtered, the number that will have to be disposed of because of the scarcity of feed, and the number which will be carried with the present feed supplies.

Clean Apple Drive Planned

Virginia Growers Told All Trucks Will Be Stopped This Fall.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Truckmen hauling apples in interstate commerce this fall will be stopped at State boundaries and their cargo examined to determine if it passes the Federal spray residue inspection regulations, John F. Earnshaw, representative of the food and drug division, United States Department of Agriculture, told fruit growers yesterday.

Earnshaw said the inspection is part of the Government's program to keep spray-covered and unwashed apples off the market, as they lower all apple prices.

Other marketing officials who met with the growers included J. H. Meek, Richmond, director of the Virginia Division of Markets; E. L. Frost, Richmond, first vice president of the National League of Commission Merchants, and Robert Bier, in charge of Federal-State inspection service for this district this season.

Mr. Meek declared there are prospects this year for the best pack ever produced by Virginia growers and added that the confidence of buyers appears to be increasing. Mr. Frost said packs must be even better than the minimum requirements.

Wife-Beater, Freed, Faces New Count

Sentence Suspended, He's Taken in Fresh Row.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Arrested for assaulting his wife the same day his sentence on previous wife-beating charges was suspended, John Flippo, 37, was jailed early this morning.

Flippo is alleged to have first struck his wife Wednesday. Yesterday he received a 90-day sentence from Justice Henry Dannehl in police court, but upon withdrawal of charges by Mrs. Flippo, his sentence was suspended on condition of good behavior for 12 months.

Last night police received another call to his home to assist Mrs. Flippo. They arrested Flippo, W. W. Wilsher and Mrs. S. M. Oliver on disorderly conduct charges, holding Flippo also on the assault offense. Trial will take place tomorrow.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

Jim Hawkins.

Although it was not his first book, Stevenson's first novel was "Treasure Island," and of all his books, it is still my favorite. He was just 33 years old when it was published; and he died when he was 44. Thus, although a chronic invalid, within 11 years he produced 11 novels, and an astonishing number of short stories, essays, books of travel, plays, poems, and many other things.

The tremendous impression made on all readers by a number of important characters in "Treasure Island"—Silver, Pew, Billy Bones, Squire Trelawny, Dr. Livesey, Capt. Smollett, Ben Gunn, Israel Hands, Tom Morgan—sometimes makes us forget the boy who tells the whole story, Jim Hawkins. But not only does the narrative gain immensely by the straightforward, apparently artless boyish style; Jim himself is the key to the whole puzzle.

No reader with any blood in his veins can ever be too old or too engrossed in mundane affairs to enjoy this gorgeous pirate story; but what boy who reads it does not envy Jim Hawkins? He passed through the most fearful adventures, had the chief part in spoiling the plots of the murderers and saving the ship and her owners, and lived to tell the tale.

It is interesting to see as the story progresses how Jim himself develops through contact with danger. When we first meet him, he is a quiet, well-behaved boy, who has no more thought of living an adventurous life on the high seas than I have now. He believed what these various scoundrels told him, for he was honest himself, and had associated with honest and fairminded people.

Jim Hawkins was not naturally built for adventures; when Billy Bones fell on the floor with apoplexy, he burst into a flood of tears. Yet such a boy, well brought up, honest, reliable, was a much better help in time of trouble and danger, than if his chief inspiration had been bloody romances and murder-movies. From beginning to end, Jim's sense of duty triumphed over his fear—and occasionally he was in mortal peril. His heroism was all the greater, because he was never consciously a hero. It was Jim Hawkins who saved the guide to "Treasure Island;" it was Jim who fell asleep in the apple-barrel on deck, and heard of the treacherous plan; it was he who got hold of the ship when she had been left at the island; it was he who killed Hands. And here are two tributes to him, first from his enemies, and then from the men whose lives he had saved.

Silver said, "It was this same boy that faked the chart from Billy Bones. First and last, we've split upon Jim Hawkins!"

Dr. Livesey said, "There is a kind of fate in this. . . . Every step, it's you that saves our lives; and do you suppose by any chance that we are going to let you lose yours?"

The real hero of the book is of course the black-hearted murderer, Silver; even as Satan is the real hero of "Paradise Lost." But Stevenson has made the boy the pivot on which the whole plot turns. Observe that from beginning to end he remains a boy, who develops through mortal peril, but who remains true to his early training. He never says a word or does an action that such a boy might not say or do. Jim Hawkins is unpretentious, but always there when he is wanted.

The book was written to please a 15-year-old boy, Lloyd Osbourne.

Back Creek 4-H Contests Sept. 15

Canning, Sewing, Baking to Be Judged.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—On Saturday, September 15, at Camp Frame, Back Creek, the 22 4-H clubs of Berkeley, Jefferson and Morgan, will hold a day of demonstrations and judging contests, with each club represented by a picked team of two demonstrators and two judges.

Demonstrations will be on the major projects which the clubs have been pushing recently, and the judging contests will be on canned fruits and vegetables, sewing and baking. The style show also will be held the same day, with some 20 girls exhibiting complete clothing outfits they have made.

Winners in all these will be taken to Petersburg the following Saturday, September 22, for competition in the regional contests there.

In connection with the day at Camp Frame a canning display will be held there, open to members of Farm Women's Club as well as to the 4-H members. The winners will also go to the higher competition at Petersburg.

Has large commanding ears, scrutinous eyes and a commodious cranium with wavy hair thinning in front as if pushing for additional space. Secretary Wallace purloined him from Hoover's Farm Board. He now eats, dreams and sleeps statistics and tabular connotations. Studious, quiet, thorough, he speaks slowly, weighs his words. Self-made, his mother's influence spurred him through wide-spread search and study. Likes walking, swimming. But really loves light opera tunes which he sings. "The Chocolate Soldier" and "The Vagabond King" are his favorites.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Virginia Legions To Meet Sept. 3

Parade, Pageant, Air Show to Be Features.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—Thousands of members of the American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary and the fun organizations, Forty and Eight and Eight and Forty, will begin arriving in Lynchburg next Sunday for the annual convention of the Virginia Department.

The occasion will be gala, as usual, for in addition to the business meetings there will be a grand parade, a beauty pageant, in which girls from nearly every county and city in the State are entered; an air circus, band concerts, dances, ball games and parties. A throng estimated at 7,000 is expected.

The formal opening is set for September 3, but preliminary exercises, such as memorial services and meetings of district delegations, are scheduled for next Sunday. The principal address of the convention will be delivered by Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of veterans' affairs, Monday morning at the first of the business sessions.

Mrs. Sharp Heads Alpha Sigma Alpha

Old Point Comfort, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Fred M. Sharp, of Independence, Mo., was reelected president of the Alpha Sigma Alpha Sorority at the Chamberlin Hotel prior to a banquet which closed the fourth day of the National convention here.

Miss Evelyn G. Bell, of Buffalo, was elected vice president, succeeding Miss Hary Wagner, of Northampton, Mass. Miss Naomi Wilcox, of Des Moines, was reelected secretary. Mrs. Reinard Schlossler, of Denver, succeeds Mrs. James G. Haworth, of Toledo, as treasurer. Mrs. William Crook, of Philadelphia, was elected registrar, succeeding Miss Evelyn Bell, of Buffalo. Miss Louise N. Stewart, of Chicago, was reelected chaplain.

Mrs. B. F. Lieb, of Indianapolis, was elected editor of Phoenix, the National publication of the sorority. She succeeds Miss Julia Lancaster, of Wellesley Farm, Mass. Miss June Smith, of Millersville, Pa., was elected extension secretary, succeeding Mrs. Wayne Fuller, of Buffalo. Miss Elizabeth Small, of Buffalo, became chairman of the finance committee.

Methodist Services Ended at Cambridge

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Sunday will bring to a close the camp meeting which has been conducted as a union service with the united membership of Beckwith and Spedden's Methodist Episcopal Churches.

The Rev. J. H. Lynch, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, Lynchburg, has been preaching during the evangelistic services. The music has been in charge of Prof. Grover Nicholson.

Horse, Pony Show Set for Children

Leesburg, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—R. T. Corbell and W. F. Peach, Leesburg horsemen, will judge the second annual children's horse and pony show to be held at Rockbridge Farm, estate of D. N. Rust, near Leesburg, Saturday afternoon.

The show is in charge of Misses Mary, Eleanor, and Betsy Rust and is open to children under 16 years of age. Forty-five entries have been received up to this time and indications point to more than a 100 horses and ponies. The show annually attracts a large attendance from this section and the District.

Among those who have made entries are Patricia and Wilson Hurley, children of former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley; Mary Alice White, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White, of Washington, D. C.; Joe Kincaid, John Gibson, jr., Stanley Green, jr., Mary Owen and Betty Lyon. Twelve classes will be shown.

Fisherville School Ready October 5

Staunton, Va., Aug. 25 (Spl.).—Destroyed by fire in the late spring, the reconstructed high school building at Fishersville is expected to be ready for occupancy when the new session opens, October 5.

Instead of the previous ten rooms, the new structure will be of 11-room capacity, and other modern conveniences and devices will be found in the building being rushed to completion. Basement accommodations are being enlarged, providing ample space for community activities. The stage will be larger, affording more seating space when commencement and other exercises are held. N. H. Moody is principal of the Fishersville school.

Clark Howell Visions Unified U. S. Air Body

Observer Predicts America May Adopt British Single Control.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

London, Aug. 26.—The possibility of organizing an American air ministry along lines similar to the British air administration was indicated by Clark Howell, head of President Roosevelt's air board, in an interview today.

Howell made his prediction prior to leaving by airplane for Spain to continue his survey of European aerial development.

He was a guest at Sir Phillip Sassoon's country estate, where he met prominent British leaders in the air ministry and royal air force.

"I think Britain has done marvelously in her aerial development," Howell said, "but the United States undoubtedly still leads the world in commercial and National defense aviation.

"It would be premature to suggest as yet the early formation of an air ministry, but Congress already has appointed an air commission to which every phase of Army, Navy and commercial flying is to be referred.

"Our mission is to stabilize the industry on a firm foundation in connection with National defense, mail and civilian flying.

"I am here solely for a study of administrative conditions. I plan to submit my findings on September 15 at a meeting called in Washington."

Asked about the possibilities of a transatlantic air-mail and passenger service, Howell replied:

"I am of the emphatic opinion that such a service is inevitable and at a very early date. It possibly will be inaugurated by a private company, with Government approval and perhaps assistance."

Frederick G.O.P. Break Is Feared

Winchester, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Although Republican leaders in Frederick County have declared that the factional fight which leaders in Frederick County have declared that the factional fight which arose in their county convention Thursday night was smoothed over, it was stated in reliable circles here today that the faction opposing the election of new officers may carry their fight to the district convention at Harrisonburg, Thursday.

Sam Brown, who was elected county chairman in 1933, and his followers, asserted that an election of officers was not in order this year, as his term was for two years. The convention here, however, proceeded to name a slate of officers with Orville Willey, of Middletown, as chairman. Delegates to the Harrisonburg convention were also named.

It is believed among some party members that both the Brown and Willey factions may have delegates at Harrisonburg in an effort to test the validity of the recent county convention.

West Virginia Train Drags Man to Death

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The body of an unidentified man was found badly mangled on the Norfolk & Western Railroad tracks near here today.

The man, about 35, weighed about 165 pounds, had dark hair and a smooth complexion. He was wearing a blue cap and blue trousers. His body had been dragged through a frog in the track and a part of his clothing was found clinging to a locomotive in Hagerstown, Md.

Methodists Ordain 2 At Clarksburg, W. Va.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Two young men were formally ordained into the Methodist Protestant ministry at a special service held by the State conference of the denomination here today with Dr. J. H. Straughn, of Baltimore, in charge.

They are the Rev. Thomas Watkins, pastor of the Lorentz Church in Upshur County, and the Rev. Guy Vincent, pastor of the church at Shinnston.

Gala Dinner Fetes Many From Capital

Col. and Mrs. Rogers Observe Anniversary of Wedding.

Exotic Setting Lends to Brilliance of Huge Event.

An elaborate dinner and dance of great interest to Capital society took place on Saturday evening, when Col. and Mrs. Henry H. Rogers entertained about 300 guests at their Italian villa on the ocean front at Southampton, Long Island, in celebration of their first wedding anniversary.

The handsomely gowned guests entered the circular walled courtyard at the entrance to the villa, which was brilliantly lighted, where the chief feature of the yard is the lily pool, lighted from underneath. Beyond the guests entered the Renaissance mansion and ascended the long stone stairway, flanked on either side by fuchia plants in full bloom, to the drawing room adorned with exotic white flowers, where the host and hostess received.

Dinner was served at tables charmingly set with sparkling crystal and silver with large bowls filled with white flowers. Lighted tapers were placed on the terrace overlooking the gardens. By means of indirect lighting the gardens beyond the north terrace had been transformed into a scene of dazzling beauty, where the decorations were white and silver. The south terrace overlooking the sea was illuminated by pendant lights, and high above the lawn were hundreds of white and silver balloons and below the terrace on the beach two huge bonfires burned.

One of the smaller gardens was converted into a Tyrolean beer garden, with singing waiters in costume and in another there was an expert handwriting analyst and a fortune teller, in costume, who amused the guests.

After dinner there was an elaborate entertainment out-of-door, where Spanish and South American dancers and singers presented native songs and dances.

Col. and Mrs. Rogers, the latter formerly Mrs. Pauline Dresser, are frequent visitors to Washington, where they have many friends who went to Southampton for the week-end to attned this dinner which took one out of the every day existence into a land of make believe.

Fete in Honor Of Lee Opens At Spa Today

Tree at Camp Site to Be Dedicated in Hero's Memory.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—The third annual Robert E. Lee Week celebrations honoring the Confederate general who created a major share of American history, opens tomorrow at this historical spa where the southern soldier spent the last few years of his life.

An impressive ceremony scheduled is the dedication of the "Lee Tree," an ancient sugar maple on Sewell Mountain, where Gen. Lee once encamped with his soldiers. Gov. H. G. Kump, of West Virginia, will make the dedication speech. A bronze plaque will be placed upon the tree commemorating the drastic maneuvers of the chieftain who fought so bravely for the South.

Another ritual of the opening day sponsored by the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be the unveiling of a large bust of Gen. Lee recently completed by Joseph C. Motto, sculptor of Rome, Italy, and Cleveland, O. The likeness was taken from photographs and engravings in the archives of the Old White Museum which is now housed in the President's Cottage and dedicated by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson to the memory of past Presidents of the United States who summered there in ante-bellum days.

A children's fancy dress ball will be another feature of the evening. "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe" is the theme of the occasion.

A "Traveller's" round robin tennis tournament, named from Lee's famous war horse, "Traveller," and a string trio will add to the entertainment.

Special Soap Melts Excess Cuticle Away

Chief Drawback of Home Manicures Is Thus Disposed Of.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WAYWARD cuticle is now under control. For the first time in manicure history there is a method for keeping it perfectly groomed.

A woman who has devoted her life to the solution of finger-nail problems has made a useful discovery. It is a cream, called a soap because of its ability to wash away the cuticle.

Instead of clipping the cuticle off with scissors, or laboriously pushing it back with an orange stick, just rub a little of this cream soap around the base of the nail. Let it remain on for 5 minutes, and then wash it off. The overgrown edges and ragged, broken bits of cuticle disappear in the washing process. Rinse your hands and look at them! The nails are as neatly outlined as if you had spent hours in the capable hands of a manicurist.

Most women agree a home manicure would be simple if it weren't for the cuticle which is difficult to clip or cut, and almost impossible to push back to a permanent state of unobtrusiveness. With the advent of this cream—or soap—home manicures are likely to increase in numbers and popularity.

35 Lucky Girls.

There are going to be 35 lucky girls in town today. They are those who reach a downtown store in time to purchase one of the 35 fur-lined tweed coats reduced today to $11.99.

They are available—if you're there in time—in diagonal and monotone weaves, predominantly brown, wine, blue and green.

Figures for Sale.

Numbers of boyish figured women are not trying to put on weight. For they argue it's easier to buy curves than it is to lose them after they are acquired. Proof that their argument is correct lies neatly tucked away in little cardboard boxes behind the counter of an F street store.

They are form fillers, made of ruffle upon ruffle of white net, sewed together in graduating tiers, and surmounted at the top with a ribbon rosette. Light and dainty in appearance they are designed to fit into the cup of a brassiere and thereby give the flattest chest a feminine curve.

Unlike many gadgets designed for the same purpose, these are budgetly priced.

By Popular Request.

There have been so many inquiries lately regarding a dry shampoo mentioned in this column several months ago that there seems but one thing to do—tell people about it again.

Contrary to expectations and appearances, a bottle containing a clear liquid bears a label, "Dry shampoo." That's because by dampening your hair with it, or using it on a comb you may give your head an excellent dry cleaning. It takes a few minutes to rid yourself of the dust and dirt of days. When you've finished the hair is spic and span—and perfectly dry.

Here's a grand thing for emergency shampoos.

Budgeteering Imbibers—Notice!

Those who have traversed the sidewalks from shop to shop in search of an inexpensive cocktail set often despair of finding it. Chrome, silver and glass shakers are all a little more than a bargain seeker wants to pay. When inexpensive ones are found they're too small or else impractical.

Try as you might, however, you can pick none of these flaws with a set featured in a downtown store. It's inexpensive—$1.19. Attractive looking—glass body, stainless chrome top with built-in strainer. Extremely practical—includes, besides a shaker, a combination spoon, bottle opener, measuring cup, also of stainless chrome.

The shaker is marked with lines and figures indicating equal sections so there'll be no doubt about the proportions of the ingredients.

Hot Plate Mats.

Some gold and silver cloth hot plate mats are selling three for 50 cents. These come in three sizes, for the little bowl, the big plate and the large platter.

Music While You Powder.

There's a musical powder box with a clock in the top of it. While you powder your nose you can tell the time to sweet and merry strains of music.

The metal box has a pastel cloissonne finish that gives it a frivolous French air. The clock is attractive and, according to the salesgirls, more reliable than the F street clocks.

Complete Manicure Kit.

A large concern which specializes in nail polishes and polish removers has just put out a complete manicure kit. A small and sturdy composition container holds any number of orange sticks, emery boards and files, polish, remover and a separate compartment for cotton. Through a little hole in the middle of this you pull out small bits of cotton as you need them. The rest keeps clean and neat.

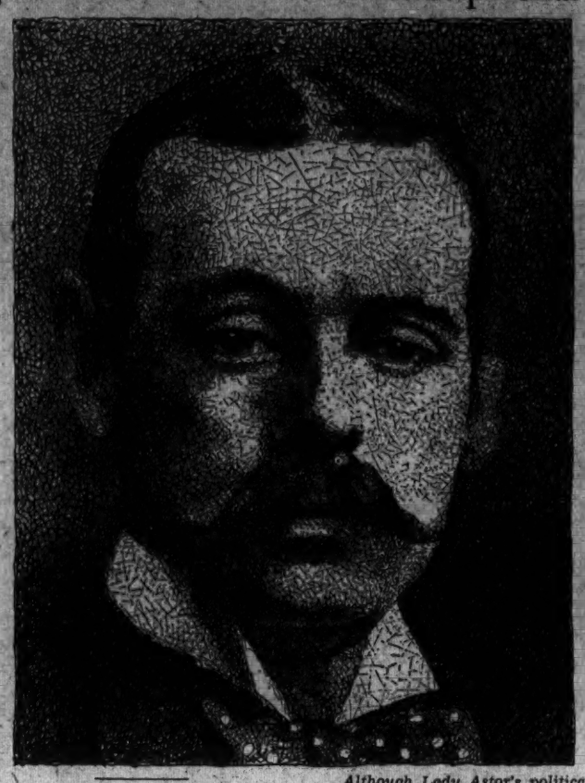
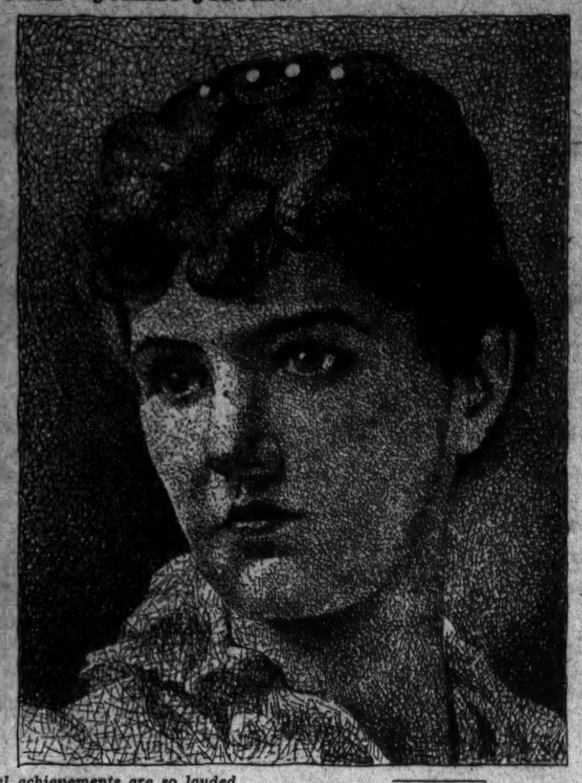
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Lord Randolph Churchill—Jennie Jerome





Although Lady Astor's political achievements are so lauded, she had a predecessor, an American girl who piloted her husband on an up-curving career that landed him in the British cabinet. Lord Randolph Churchill and Jennie Jerome had, however, more in common than mere politics; they were overwhelmingly in love and romantic about it until his premature death.

She Was a Pioneer In Politics, Campaigning for Her Husband.

Their Marriage Was a Brilliant One From Every Viewpoint.

By Elisabeth Poe.

IN these days American wives of British noblemen are no novelty at the Court of St. James. And one is apt to forget, in present-day chatter about the political fortunes of Lady Astor, that before her day other American wives have taken part in British politics with quite remarkable success.

Romance with a large "R" has featured many of the international marriages that have united American women with Englishmen. It was undeniably present in the alliance between the sprightly Jennie Jerome, of New York City, and the dashing Lord Randolph Churchill, second son of the then Duke of Marlborough. This international affair was the talk of the hour 60 years ago and the memory of it has lingered long on both sides of the Atlantic.

Over American coffee cups and dainty Sevres tea cups in Mayfair's smart drawing rooms the chit-chat was about "Randy" Churchill and his fair American bride. They were feted and admired for their evident romantic attachment to one another. True, the Old Lady of Windsor did not look with any too kindly eye on such alliances. But she was fond of true love and real lovers. Into her dim gray-blue eyes came a softer look when she heard how the American girl had taken a "younger son" without much worldly prospect for love's sake alone.

A Debonair Couple.

Little did Jennie Jerome or Randolph Churchill care about the comments of the court or the world on their marriage. They were both young, she beautiful, he debonair, and the world seemed rosy. And, best of all, the stately Duchess of Marlborough adored her new daughter-in-law and saw to it personally that every worthwhile London door opened gladly for her entrance.

It was in the early '50's when Leonard Jerome, founder of the New York Jockey Club and business man and sportsman, and his good wife January 9, 1854, became the parents of a daughter whom they named "Jane," but which cognomen was soon shortened to "Jennie." Little Jane had two sisters who followed in the Jerome family cradle. Jane was a winsome child, attractive, fair to look upon and the pet of her father.

When she was in her eleventh year the Jeromes went to Paris. There Jennie was surrounded by every educational and cultural advantage possible. Music was her delight and she developed into a pianist of more than ordinary ability. In after years she often participated in musicales in her London home. There is little doubt that, had she pursued music as a profession, she would have made her mark in the world of music.

As Jane grew into young womanhood she shared in the social delights of the Second Empire. Paris was then a gay spot of glitter and laughter. With wealth at her command, and possessing much of the charm of her daughter, Mrs. Jerome was soon a popular hostess of the foreign colony. Jane was acclaimed as a belle and a beauty and presented at all the court functions.

Moved to England.

Then came the Franco-Prussian war and the Jeromes set up residence in England. The summer of 1873 was spent in Cowes.

Romance was waiting for its entrance into the life of Jennie Jerome. Suitors galore she had had, but they had seemed alien to her. Now, in her twentieth year, she was a picture of maidenly beauty, with big, dark eyes, purple-black hair and clear olive skin. Tall and slender, she had a dignity of carriage and a quietness of manner that enhanced her attractiveness.

Fate neared in the person of Randolph Churchill, second son of the sixth Duke of Marlborough. He went to the Isle of Wight for his summer holidays, after a year or two of travel throughout Europe and Asia.

Jennie Jerome was introduced to him. In that first moment he fell madly in love with her. She had been out of her native land, homesick for English ways and English customs as compared to the delightful but not so substantial, perhaps, Latin traits, so he attracted her. The time, the place and the girl! Could a young Englishman ask for more?

Back he went to London and asked for his mother's aid and blessing in his courtship. That was a clever stroke for he brought a powerful ally on his side at once.

Mrs. Jerome was not so complaisant toward his wishes.

She had high ambitions for her daughter, perhaps dreamed of a ducal crown and there seemed little prospect for this in marriage with Lord Churchill, a second son, with no particular career ahead of him. So she took her daughters back to Paris. Young Churchill followed and pleaded his cause so skillfully that consent was won. Jennie said "yes" and, at the British Embassy in Paris in January, 1874, Lord Randolph Churchill and Jennie Jerome were made man and wife.

The Political Career.

Jennie was ambitious for her husband. Under the spur of her wishes he decided to enter a political career and he was elected to Parliament. It was predicted in short order that a new political light had arisen upon the horizon of British life and it was no idle surmise at that. "A new Disraeli" some even declared.

Lady Churchill was happy in her husband's success, her home and finally her two sons, Winston S. Churchill, born November 30, 1874 and John Winston Churchill in February, 1880. In 1883 Lord Churchill founded the powerful Primrose League. Lady Churchill was among the first 12 to join and from that moment began her active share in his political career. In 1885 she performed the unheard of—at that time—feat of personally electioneering for her husband when he stood for the seat then held by Mr. John Bright for Birmingham. Lady Churchill was welcomed in factory and home good-naturedly and with considerable curiosity.

At the head of his party, brilliant futures were forecast for him, and his wife kept pace with him in popularity and interest. All that life could offer seemed to be his for the asking.

Then suddenly, without any warning, Churchill arose in the House of Commons and announced that he was withdrawing from the cabinet. He was only 37 at the time and his hearers were amazed. Lady Churchill only smiled loyally when questioned. She knew his motives, although she was one of a very few who were aware that it was oncoming ill health that had caused his decision.

The Sad Close.

Her political interests diverted for the time, Lady Churchill took up literature, writing her memoirs. Meantime, she cruised around the world with Lord Randolph, he searching for the health he was not to regain. Finally, while they were in Egypt on the futile mission, he begged to go home to pass his last hours in England. He was but 47, and their romance was nearing a close. Devoted lovers as ever, what pathos is in the story of those last days when they knew they must soon be separated by death "that stalked between the past and what will be, with love alone, a greater god than he."

Her devotion to him is a legend of British social history. While the gay world called she stayed by him, lavishing on him the wealth of her beauty, courage and inspiration. Hearts ached for them as all waited for the news that must come from the stately Churchill home. Then on January 24, 1895, the mournful tolling of the bells of St. George's Church, Hanover Square, announced that "Randy" Churchill had come to the end of his pilgrimage.

Lady Churchill did not cease in National interest after her husband's death. Her intense interest in her sons' careers, her literary career and civic and social pursuits made life worth while for her, even though so bereaved. And the story of her romance remains that of one international alliance that was, in every sense of the word, a success.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Multiple Births.

Because of the widespread interest in the question of multiple births, no doubt aroused by the quintuplets born a short time ago to a Canadian mother, numerous letters have been received asking about the frequency of twins, triplets, quadruplets, &c.

During recent years, since more attention has been paid to vital statistics, fairly accurate records show that in the United States twins occurred approximately once in 87 confinements, triplets once in 8,745 and quadruplets once in every 552,000. Between the years of 1923 and 1932 no birth of quintuplets is recorded.

W. W. Greulich collected data on more than 121,000,000 births occurring in 21 countries. In this long series there were 1,408,912 twin births, 15,738 triplets and 179 quadruplets. Greulich established a mathematical factor based upon his collected data. He used the figure 87 inasmuch as twin births occurred once in 87 confinements. He reasoned that triplets would occur once in 7,569 confinements [the square of 87] and that quadruplets would occur once in 658,503 [the cube of 87]. Carrying the figure to the fourth power would result in quintuplets once in 57,289,761 confinements.

The tendency to multiple births is apparently peculiar to certain mothers who may have more than one set of twins and perhaps triplets in addition. Heredity plays an important role and can follow either the father or the mother. Frederick C. Irving cites a case in which a man was the father, by his first wife, of quadruplets once and twins ten times. His second wife had triplets three times and twins ten times.

There are two kinds of twins. Two maternal ova or eggs may be fertilized about the same time. Children born of this two-egg fertilization, although they develop together, may be no more alike than two children born a dozen years apart to the same parents. They may be the same or of opposite sex.

This Autumn's Furless Coat Is a Smart-Looking Number

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Don't for a minute think that in order to be smart this fall you must have your coat luxuriously furred. Not a bit of it. There are at least three different fashionable types which have no more fur than an egg. And one of them is fairly dressy, too.

That's the type we've had sketched, a trimly belted coat with a softly draped neckline which is finished off with a scarf.

Picture this in one of the gayer colors, rust or green and in a soft tweed weave. Couldn't you walk right up anywhere you wanted to go and feel well dressed in it? Of course you could.

And times when you did want some fur, on a colder day or when you wanted a particularly dressed-up look, you could whisk off the scarf or, if it weren't easily detachable, tuck it inside the high left side fastening, and wear your separate fur scarf.

Less dressy than this is the loose-fitting, man-tailored English type topcoat with raglan sleeves and roomy pockets.

Take it in bright colors or subdued ones, it's right either way. And if you look about you'll find one with the new detachable extra lining, which snaps in—or out—quick as a wink.

Then there's the polo coat, still in fashion and particularly liked by those who need a real utility coat—one which can take a lot of hard usage and like it.

Following the fashion for reefer cuts, it's made double-breasted and snugly belted. And in heavier fabrics, such as fleece, it is certainly a coat to take the knocks and remain good-looking.

Coats of the type described are available in Washington in all the better shops and department stores.

Japan Responsible For Winter Flowers

U. S. Imports the Popular Hydrangea and Jasmine.

The Japanese can be thanked for most of our winter flowers.

Among the most popular flowers imported from Japan are the chrysanthemum, and the winter-flowering jasmine. This flower blooms all through December and January. After it comes the pyrus japonica, which has brilliant red flowers and is one of the hardiest of the spring-flowering shrubs.

The hydrangeas, blue and white, are Japanese, and so is the camellia. Weigelia and berberis are Japanese importations; so are azaleas and wistaria.

Wistaria was brought over from Japan about 130 years ago and is perhaps the most beautiful of all the flowering shrubs.

In China it is planted along the rivers and the tough stems are used for hauling boats up the rapids.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

Deborah's grandfather tied up her fortune so that she could not make the mistake her mother did and elope with a stranger. By the will she must marry the son of Courtney Graham, whom her mother jilted. But the youth is not the man his father was; he wants only Deborah's money. To prevent the marriage, and disaster to Deborah, a wealthy young man named Bryn marries her; the two of them agree to let her grandmother believe that Bryn is actually Stuart Graham. The young couple, married on the Coast, go to live on grandmother's lonely mountain ranch.

BRYN reached into his pocket mechanically for his cigarette case. "Mind if I smoke?"

Across the low round table, Deborah shook her head. She watched him closely as he lit the cigarette and inhaled deeply. "Do you like that?" she inquired, fascinated.

"Smoking?"

"Grandfather didn't smoke, and Gary doesn't either, any more, although I think he used to have a pipe. Everybody seems to be smoking cigarettes out in the world. Even ladies. Is it pleasant?"

"Want to try?"

Her eyes danced, but she shook her head. "I don't think I'd enjoy it, not really, and Grandmother would be horrified. No. Is it considered proper, now, for ladies to smoke?"

"They all do it."

Bryn thought of Pilar and her constant cigarettes, one lit always from the end of the last one, her long jade holder, her thin stained fingers.

Women smoke now for the same reasons men do," he explained. "And it's no use asking me why men do, because I don't know. It's easier and less conspicuous to smoke nowadays than not to smoke."

World Disappointing.

Deborah sighed. "The world is very bewildering," she confessed. "Those three days when we were waiting for the . . . license, I sat up in the parlor at the hotel and watched from the window. It wasn't at all what I expected. I thought it would be less noisy, more dignified. Grandmother would be terrified at the change. She knows there is a change, but she couldn't believe how great it is unless she saw."

"Did you enjoy watching, Deborah?"

She considered. "I don't know. I was, of course, distracted. I shouldn't enjoy living in such confusion. This is a great deal better."

Her glance surveyed the quiet corner in which they sat. There was no sound to be heard save that of their own voices, the impudent chattering of the squirrels, and an occasional bird call.

After a moment she looked up. "You told me . . . and Mr. Holworthy told me, too . . . that a divorce is easy to get nowadays."

"Very easy."

"I didn't ask you," she went on slowly, "something I should have asked. In Grandmother's day a divorce was dreadful. I'd scarcely heard them mentioned. A divorce was a disgraceful thing. Tell me, is it a disgraceful thing to be divorced? Does it . . . mark one?"

"We can manage it so quietly that no one will know you've been married, Deborah."

The "Girl" Enters.

"I wasn't thinking exactly of myself," she said, faint color in her cheeks. "Nobody knows me. It wouldn't matter. I was thinking of you. I was wondering if the . . . the girl you . . . that is, the girl you care about won't mind rather dreadfully. I don't quite understand these things," she hurried on, "but I think if I were she I should mind."

"Did I say I cared about a girl?" Bryn inquired, in surprise.

"Perhaps I saw for myself that there must be one. You spoke of sacrifices. You couldn't have meant your career, because you told me yourself it was at a standstill, and would be assisted by this agreement of ours. And . . . I saw quite a lot of other young men," she said, scarlet but determined, "and it seems to me that you and your friend, Mr. Forbes, were much the . . . the most attractive. So there must be a girl. I am glad, of course. It will make Gary feel much better. But has the world become so liberal-minded that she won't mind your taking this way to earn money for her?" Her eyes lifted to his, waiting.

Bryn considered. Had he stopped beating his wife, or hadn't he stopped beating his wife? If he said there was no girl, Deborah might take fright again. Gary, thoroughly conscious of the amount of loveliness and charm and innocence which Deborah possessed, would certainly do what he could to spoil this friendliness and trust which were beginning to spring to life.

To Tell Tubby.

"I must tell Tubby what you said about him," he said lightly. "He will be extremely flattered, as I am. And grateful. As for your other question—I can assure you that no complication whatever will arise."

She had begun to speak, perhaps to question him further, when a bell tinkled inside the kitchen. She rose hastily. "That's grandmother," she explained, and hurried down the steps to the narrow side door into the kitchen.

Bryn went inside, Gary looked up, a little less hostile; he and Deborah, as Bryn knew very well, had had a long conversation while he was upstairs shaving.

Byrn picked up a dish-towel. "What are you going to do today, Gary? I've got to have something to do, too."

Gary glanced up at him from under his bushy brows. "There's enough to do," he said slowly. "But it's not likely the kind of work you've been used to."

"Well, I can pick cherries. Deborah said you could use them. I suppose the strawberries in the patch have to be picked, too, haven't they? I can collect eggs. Also, I can fish. And I saw some very nice little frying rabbits scamping about on the hillside. If you want some, and have a gun, I can shoot."

Gary sighed. "All them things has to be done," he said. "And there's potatoes to hoe and corn to weed, and cucumbers and melons to water, and raspberries to tie up, and there's some branches of the apricot trees needing propping. I noticed yesterday. I can manage, all right; although . . ." he looked over his shoulder and lowered his voice, "if I don't watch Miss Deborah she goes out hoeing in the hot sun, when her grandmother's taking a nap. She's too delicate for that kind of thing, but she won't listen." He propped his hand on the edge of the sink and looked up. "If you want to work," he said, "there's plenty to be done."

Hint of Tragedy.

Bryn put a foot on the chair beside the sink. "Had your hands full, hadn't you?" he said.

There was a light footstep and Deborah came in. She was very pale, and there was in her face such a look of misery that both men stiffened themselves involuntarily.

"Grandmother liked the strawberries," Deborah said dismally. She might have been announcing the end of the world.

Gary went over to her. "What's happened, Miss Deborah?" he begged.

"Nothing," Deborah replied miserably. "I . . . I think I'll go out and see if there are any peas ready."

"What's happened?" Gary asked again, his face working. "What's the matter, Miss Deborah? Did you tell her? Did she guess about . . ." his eyes went to Bryn.

Deborah shook her head. Suddenly, without warning, two large tears slipped out of her eyes and began to roll slowly down her cheeks. Bryn took a step forward and stopped himself with a hand on the chair back. Gary did not hesitate. He put his loyal old arms about her and pulled her head down on his shoulder. "There, now, Miss Deborah, darling, tell me. What's broken your heart?"

She rested against him for only a minute, and when she looked up there were no more tears. She fumbled among the blue ruffles of her skirt for a pocket and produced a piece of paper. Unfolded, it was a long sheet, covered with small precise writing. She laid it on the table.

"There," she said tremulously. "That's our marketing list for today."

"Marketing list?" Gary repeated, with utter horror. He stared at the paper as if it were a message of destruction from Mars.

Shopping List.

Deborah looked up, and met Bryn's eyes, as he stood motionless in the shadow. She stared at him, bit her lip, and rose again. He came forward. He put out his hand and took the list which she was trying to fold.

"Five dozen wax tapers, of the best quality," Bryn read out. "A cook and three housemaids."

"Copies of all the modern magazines, particularly those relating to ladies' fashions and the new methods of entertaining.

"A plumber to inspect all the plumbing of the house. A man to put the electric plant in order.

"A catalogue of comfortable motor cars.

"Four or five gardeners.

"A man who understands horses, knows where they may be obtained and can care for them.

"Ten pounds of the best Jasmine tea."

"Eight dollars a pound," Gary breathed. "That's her special blend.'

"A cow, or sufficient cows to give plenty of rich cream."

"Well," Bryn said after a moment, "it's a fairly good beginning. I don't suppose she's heard of electric refrigerators, or vacuum cleaners, or radios, or any number of other modern inventions. The magazines will undoubtedly help, unless we go over them first and cut out all the advertisements."

"Electric refrigerator?" Gary echoed, dismally. "How much do they cost?"

Capital Kitchen

Nations Seem Competing to Produce Best Ways of Fixing Eggs.

By Susan Mills.

THERE'S a lot of nourishment in eggs, and a lot of different ways to prepare them. Egg recipes come in from all over the world, and it seems each one is a little better than the other; countries almost vie with each other to produce the best.

Here are examples of unusual egg recipes:

Egg Foo Yeung (Chinese Omelet).

6 eggs well beaten
1 can bean sprouts or mixed vegetables, well drained.
½ cup cold chicken or other meat, shredded.
¼ cup onion, shredded.

Mix all ingredients and put by half-cupfulls into skillet in which a little cooking oil has been heated. Cook in cake form. Fry until brown on one side, then turn and brown on other. Serve with sauce made by thickening soybean sauce with cornstarch.

Stampa di Spinaci (Mold of Spinach with Eggs—Italian).

1 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
2 cups cooked spinach
Grated cheese
3 eggs
Brown stock
Salt and pepper

Make a smooth, white sauce of the milk, butter and flour. Add to the sauce the spinach, chopped very fine, a few tablespoons of grated cheese, the eggs beaten, a few tablespoons of brown stock (or a bouillon cube dissolved in a little hot water), and salt and pepper to season. Mix thoroughly and pour into a buttered mold. Steam as a custard until it is firm, then turn it out on a hot platter. Brown stock or tomato sauce may be poured over this, but it is excellent served hot just as it is.

Salmon Souffle.

2 cups salmon
½ cup bread crumbs
½ cup milk
3 eggs, separated
Paprika

Flake the salmon and remove the bones. Heat the bread crumbs in the milk for five minutes. Add the salmon, the well beaten egg yolks and the seasonings. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Pour into a buttered baking dish, set into a pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 45 minutes, or until set.

Zimmetstangen (German Cinnamon Sticks).

4 egg whites
¾ pound sugar
1 ounce cinnamon
14 ounces pounded almonds

Beat the whites of eggs until stiff and stir with the sugar for 15 minutes, or until the sugar is practically dissolved. Then add the cinnamon and almonds to form a paste. Place little strips of this paste (about 3 inches long and one-half inch thick) on a buttered cookie sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven (350 degrees to 400 degrees Fahrenheit).

'Phone Operators Save Woman's Life

Sisters Rescue Her From Locked Apartment.

Cincinnati, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Service beyond the line of duty on the part of two sisters, long-distance telephone operators, probably saved the life of a recent bride. The sisters were the Misses Clara and Catherine Meehan, whose quick thinking and persistence rushed Mrs. Jean Luckey, 26, to General Hospital after she was found unconscious in her apartment, suffering from poison.

The woman's condition was discovered when she failed to answer after placing a long-distance call to a small Illinois town. The party in Illinois became alarmed and signaled Miss Clara Meehan, the operator, who called her sister, Catherine, supervisor.

The sisters found the janitor of the building, who forced his way into the young woman's apartment and sent her to a hospital.

A Tree Seems Confused.

Billings, Mont., (U.P.).—Mother Nature has her seasons slightly mixed, judging from a crabapple tree in the Billings orchard of Barnum B. Torrence. The tree is sporting blossoms and ripe fruit on the same branches.

Furs Show Big Variety In Design

Parisian Houses Exhibit Contradictory Use of Fine Pelts.

Couturiers Dye Fox All Sorts of Colors, Blue Green and Red.

PARIS, Aug. 26 (AP).—The furs and fur trims which appear in this winter's mode just displayed by Parisian dressmakers show the widest variety of cut and the most contradictory designs exhibited in many years.

There are large collars and small, lavish trims and sparing use of pelts, costly furs and inexpensive ones.

Furs dyed to match the fabric which they trim are another note this season. Navy blue, Titian red and aubergine dyed foxes appear on coats of these hues. One sports coat is lined with fur dyed a light green.

Stoles and Boleros.

Silver fox and astrakhan collars in luxurious cape or stole designs contrast with small astrakhan and nutria collars which hug close to the throat. There are also bolero effects lined with Hudson seal or carried out in black astrakhan.

There are wide bands of fur, such as astrakhan paws down the front of a coat, wide insets of nutria on the back skirt from waist to hem, back bodice plastrons of astrakhan extending from a small collar, and entire sleeves of unplucked seal or gray galyak. Most of these coats with fur applications are finished with fairly small collars.

Silver Fox Is Normal Trim.

Black astrakhan and silver foxes are great favorites as trimmings for formal coats Alaskan seal dyed a warm dark brown, Hudson seal, gray astrakhan, leopard, panther, galyak and nutria are also used.

Fur toques, muffs and capes appear in many houses. Astrakhan is the favorite fur for these, though other pelts appear. The toques are generally fairly small, the muffs rather large, while the capes swing to a point a little below the waist or are three-quarter length.

Cloth capes lined or trimmed with fur are an outstanding note of the season.

PILLAR TO POST

BRIG. GEN. JUAN F. AZCARATE, military attache of the Mexican Embassy, to be host this afternoon at a cocktail party for the newly arrived Mexican polo-ists scheduled for a match with the U. S. Army team in September, has a curious story to tell of the origin of polo.

* * * *

An ancient king was ailing and the court physician was at his wits' end to diagnose the royal case, which he strongly suspected was more hypochondria than anything else. So he ordered his highness to mount a horse with a long stick and to knock about the castle grounds a ball made of medicinal herbs. The herbs, the doctor promised, would cure the kingly aches and pains.

* * * *

Sure enough, the king, after getting exercise in the fresh air knocking around the "pill," began to feel better. He began to feel so much better he insisted his ministers take the same medicine, and that was the origin of the first polo team.

* * * *

It is odd the origin of polo should be attributed to a hypochondriac when the game is now more dangerous, rating even above prize fighting, than any other form of sport. Polo players are often associated in the public mind with dilettantes and sons of the wealthy who would be expected to be rather soft. Nothing could be farther from the truth, for only the toughest can take it.

* * * *

Silver-haired Maj. J. M. Swing is a splendid example of the players who will be pitted against the Mexicans in the coming matches. Most of the men on the Army team are older than the Mexicans they will play against in a game where youthful endurance and strength often outweighs experience and skill. But our men whipped the hard young Mexicans on their own grounds last March, and when the latter left Mexico City with grim determination to wrest the honors from the United States 10,000 people were at the station crying "Ganode los Americans!"

* * * *

Polo is more of a national sport in Mexico than it is here. One of the most colorful sights in Mexico City is the Charro, a riding and polo organization, parading the broad plazas wearing big sombreros, embroidered jackets, silver spurs, their silver mounted saddles.

* * * *

When the United States Army team was there in March, a parade was put on in their honor and afterward they were entertained with a rodeo and bull fight. A fiesta was given them in the floating gardens of Xochmilico; they were poled along the canals while senoritas in passing barges pelted them with flowers.

* * * *

The American team was taken to Cuernavaca to visit the estate where the late Senator Dwight Morrow lived when he was Ambassador to Mexico, a home still owned by Mrs. Morrow. They saw the beautiful garden where Lindy courted Ann. As a parting gesture, they were carried to the Mexican border in the president's private car, which included the services of his personal chef. They hope to return the Mexicans' hospitality during their present visit.

Who Has Set a Foot on Heights

WHO has set a foot on heights and touched a star
With reverent finger-tips shall know
No more the valley's calm, nor go
In paths where strange winds singing blow
Unhearing music. Height nor depth may bar
His striving wing—whose hand has touched a star;
Who has set foot on heights shall not again
Know loneliness. A hidden spring
Unlocks to his remembering
The flame that kindles common thing
Into breathless beauty . . . fainting hearts of men
See in his burning eyes—God, born again.

Rainy Day

BESIDE my window casement clings
A butterfly with rain-drenched
wings.

To me small matter if it rain—
Tomorrow brings the sun again;

But if my life were one brief day
And all my sky was sodden gray

And cold rain fell unceasingly—
What could amend the tragedy!

Beside my window casement clings
A butterfly with rain-drenched
wings.

Freedom

ONCE I was free, and lonely—
Free as a woodland dove.
I hated my freedom. I only
Wanted love.

Then love came, with laughter,
And morning, and silver rains,
And stardust, and magic, and wonder—
And chains.

Love holds me with cunning fetters;
(Oh, dear small hands that cling!)
Now freedom is heartbreak, but oh, it's
A precious thing!

But I know it's a lovely thing.

Ghostly Fabric

I HEARD a symphony once tear
A gold and shadowy piece of silk,
Crashing to shreds a fabric spun
Of delicate moonlight, white as milk,
And slowly, as white roses bloom
Under the gold light of the sun,
I heard them weave it, thin as air,
Over the shuttles of its loom,
And the brocade again was there.

Fisherman's Daughter

SHE liked to skip along the water's edge,
To gather shells and strangely treasured things,
To smell the ocean, hear along the sedge
The chanteys of the breeze. The lazy wings
Of gulls delighted her. She always found
Those tragic places where the falling tide
Had caught a minnow. She would watch the ground
For soldier crabs to come with cautious stride
And shuffle out across their settlement
Of tiny holes, and she would laugh to see Them scamper back again. And so she spent
The hours in simple, summer
revelry.
A mermaid caught in nets and brought ashore
Would not have known as much of ocean lore.

Old Brick House

THE old brick house is reticent,
While years go marching through,
It does not prattle of its woes,
As wooden houses do.

Its ghosts are always courteous,
They never stop or stare,
And only by your sudden chill,
You know that they are there.

Raindrops

MISTY and gray through a weary day
The raindrops fall, Softly they tread, like ghosts of the dead
In a somber pall;
Or laughing along with pulsing song
And dancing glee,
They flow and glide, to join the tide
That makes the sea!

Hands Need Daily Dozen For Beauty

Cosmetics Help, But Need the Aid of Careful Exercise.

Rhythmic Motions More Benefit When Done to Music.

By Frances Mangum.

THE hands need a daily dozen.

There are so many beautifying and bleaching lotions on the market and so many manicure preparations that many women rely on these alone to keep their hands in condition.

It is true they will help. There's a lemon lotion of the color and pungent aroma of lemons that is said to be a soothing bleacher and softener. There's a cream soap for washing away the cuticle, a nail cream to soften brittle nails, a polish remover with an oily base that will not dry the nails.

Little Help Without Exercise.

One could go on for hours naming new hand preparations. And one could go on for years using them and never have hands as beautiful as they might be from these cosmetics plus exercise.

Exercising the hands is one of the easiest things in the world, and fun, too. Its easier to do with music, so turn on the radio or the victrola and begin now.

1. Shake your hands briskly from the wrists, imitating the movements of an orchestra leader.

2. Hold the hands high over your head for a minute. Bring them down to your sides slowly and completely relaxed.

Play the Piano.

3. Imaginary piano playing exercises help keep fingers young and graceful. Place your hand on a table (the imaginary piano) with the fingers touching and the hand raised. Keep the palm of the hand parallel with the table and in such a position that you could easily hold a coin on the back of your hand, just above the knuckles. Now raise each finger separately five times, holding the fingers firmly on the table.

4. Hold the thumb stiff. Bend each finger to meet the thumb, stretching the ligaments. Do this 20 times slowly and you've given your hands a real workout.

5. Here's something that's fun. Move your hands through the air imitating the motion of a bird in flight. Sway them slowly up and down. Let the wrists lead.

Strictly Speaking

What About These?

1. Where is the accent in Fontainebleau?
2. Who was Jean Valjean and how is his name pronounced?
3. What is a sachem?
4. Is satire called SAY-tire or SAT-ire?
5. Is tangerine preferably pronounced tan-jer-EEN or TAN-jer-en?

Answers Here.

1. On the last syllable. Fontan-BLOW, not FON-tan-blow.
2. Jean Valjean (Zhan valzhan) is a character in "Les Miserables."
3. A sachem (SAY-chem) is a chief in some tribes of American Indians.
4. Both pronunciations are correct.
5. TAN-jer-en is preferable, but tan-jer-EEN is also correct.

Two-in-One Egg Laid.

Bridgeport, Conn. (U.P.).—Maybe it's the New Deal. One of Joseph Ferucci's hens laid a "two-in-one" egg, one inside of the other and both having normal shells. The eggs weighed nearly three-quarters of a pound. The hen weighed a pound and a half.

Strong Censure Of Baby Bonuses Provokes Donor

New York, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—For many years Stephen Duffy, Brooklyn contractor, has been presenting $100 checks to employes when new babies arrived in their families. And no one has objected.

But the Brooklyn contractor now reports birth-control advocates are taking him to task.

"I very strongly condemn this baby bonus," one woman wrote. "Perhaps you would like to see it spread to fill up a lot of vacant apartments."

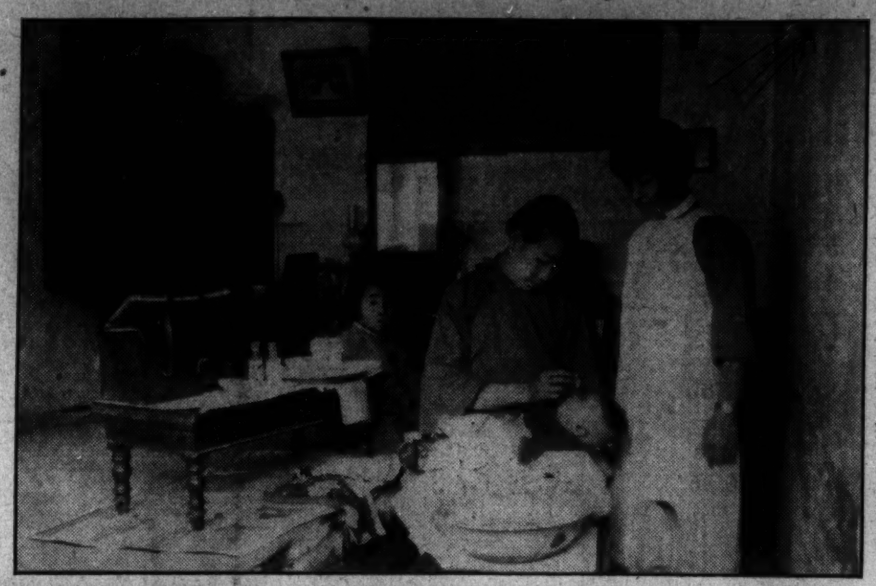
But the contractor sees nothing wrong in the custom, and refuses to discontinue it.

"We don't regard it as a bonus at all," he said. "We figure that at the birth of every child a family has additional expense, so on the happy occasion we send the proud parents a little note, and a check for $100, as a token of our good wishes."

When there are twins, the check is raised to $250.

The employes themselves are highly in favor of the custom. And Mr. Duffy suggests that there are other fields of service where the birth-control advocates might better employ their time.

Chinese Women of the Middle Class Held Seeking More Self-Education



Above is the interior of a Chinese home in Peiping, where a baby is receiving a bath under supervision of a native nurse. Miss Anne McCabe, left, who has returned from a five-year study in China with the Rockefeller Foundation, helped establish a demonstration health center in Peiping.

They're No Housekeepers, Visiting Nurse Says, and Consequently Have Time to Cast About for All the Culture They Can Obtain.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

HER BABY wrapped in a cotton-padded gown, sleeping comfortably on a full stomach of soy beans or buffalo milk, her mother-in-law in customary command of servants and household, the modern middle class Chinese woman is in avid pursuit of self education today. Enduring the discomfort of unheated schoolhouses in winter time and forgoing leisure hours for health clinic instruction, the almond-eyed daughter of the Orient is swinging swiftly abreast of the times.

Five years ago she mistrusted modern medicine. Today she not only welcomes it but enlightens her sisters as to its benefits. With instruction on dietetics, sanitation and child care, the maternal and infant mortality rate in Peiping has dropped to a comparatively low level since 1929.

Exceptional intelligence and an insatiable hunger for knowledge are the two factors that will accomplish complete emancipation of the Chinese woman in the near future, believes Miss Anne McCabe, supervisor in the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, who has recently returned to Washington from a five-year study with the Rockefeller Foundation in Peiping.

They're No Housekeepers.

"The Chinese woman, even in the poorer classes, is not a housekeeper," said Miss McCabe. "Custom, which allots an average of five servants to the ordinary family, has conspired to keep her from mastering the art. Her food is purchased from street push carts, and heretofore, she has given little thought to it's preparation.

"But she is a devoted mother. The average family consists of about six children, and the mother nurses and cares for them herself. Her hopes and ambitions revolve about them. It was an appeal through her children that first won the ear of the Chinese mother to modern health education."

Acting as instructor in public health nursing at the Peiping Union Medical School, Miss McCabe was lent by the school to the Peiping municipal government to assist in establishing a health demonstration station at a strategic point in the city. Opening quarters in a remodeled Buddhist temple, the station concentrated its educational campaign upon a unit of 150,000 inhabitants, a representative cross-section of the city.

As the station chief, Miss McCabe was the only white woman on the staff. Her first task was to train a group of native nurses in public health technique. When she left China, she had a trained staff of 66, whose educational and nursing service program not only extended into the poorer and middle class homes, but into the schools, factories and other commercial centers.

Reduction of Mortality.

A reduction of the maternal and infant mortality rate was one of the most striking accomplishments of the station's five-year program, according to Miss McCabe.

Chinese custom, according to Miss McCabe, forbids male doctors to attend mothers in childbirth. As there are few women physicians, midwifery is a flourishing profession. So part of the aim of the station was to raise the service of these attendants to a higher standard.

The modern Chinese young woman is well grounded in cultural as well as more practical subjects, according to Miss McCabe. She engages in women's sports, is interested in politics. She is a bright, witty conversationalist and a brilliant contract bridge player.

"But at the engagement party," she said, "and these are very popular social functions with both sexes present, the conversation revolves about how many children the prospective bride should have. Male children still rank first in importance. However, once a son is born, the average father demonstrates more affection toward his daughters. But with a dowry on their heads, daughters are luxuries the poor Chinese family can ill afford."

Chinese women do not age as quickly as their western sisters, believes Miss McCabe. Very few middle-aged Chinese women have wrinkles, she said. Their hair is not allowed to get grey, but is constantly touched up with black dye.

Two meals a day is the order in China, she explained. The first comes at about 10:30 in the morning. It consists of millet (prepared similarly to corn meal mush), salted fish, tea, cabbage and small cakes covered with sesame seeds.

The elaborateness of the next meal, in the late afternoon, depends upon the position of the family as well as upon the occasion, she said. Banquets involve from 20 to 150 courses, beginning with watermelon seeds and ending with rice.

"When one is a guest of honor at a large dinner," said Miss McCabe, "one must either wear formal American dress, or the accepted Chinese costume (Miss McCabe invariably wore the latter, as it was considered more complimentary to her host), and arrive from one hour to one hour and a half late. It is a breach of etiquette to arrive at the stated time.

Eat and Run.

"Seating the guests is a drawn-out ceremony which involves time and argument. The host and hostess help their guests to the dishes placed in the center of the table. Then the host proceeds to run down the courses, to which the guests are expected to respond with praise that will more than counteract the effect.

"Once the meal is finished, the guests must not linger, but must bid adieu briefly and leave. Everything that is to be said is said during the meal, which often lasts as late as 10 o'clock."

Established in her Kew Gardens apartment, which is decorated picturesquely in Oriental motif, Miss McCabe looks forward to a day in the near future when she can again set foot on Eastern shores and take up a fascinating work where she left off.

Women Swimming Pupils Have Trouble Managing Their Feet

First They Can't Get Them Off the Bottom, Then They Can't Get Them Down Again; Fear of Water Biggest Handicap, Says Instructor.

"I JUST can't get my feet off the bottom," is the cry of the middle-aged woman learning to swim. Several days later, after due instruction by her swimming teacher, her cry changes to, "I just can't get my feet down again." Both cries must be dealt with psychologically by the instructor.

"Fear of the water is the greatest handicap of the would-be swimmer; she is always insisting she 'just can't,'" says Miss Martha Justice, swimming instructor at the Municipal Pool. Miss Justice pointed out that the instructor must inspire in the beginner self-confidence—the kind of self-confidence a housewife has when dealing with an objectionable book agent or when upbraiding the butcher for overcharging. That same determination is all she needs to put her feet in their proper place.

Beginners of both sexes and all ages seem to object to getting their faces wet, swimming instructors report. A drop or two of water smites them in the nose, and they cough violently, blink and open and shut their mouths. A little familiarity with the water soon causes the coughs, blinks, and open and shuts to abate; the beginner is then graduated to the stage in which she can become completely submerged and think nothing of it; the water holds no more terrors than if combined with a bit of soap and a bath cloth.

Men instructors say men, once they "take the notion," are easier to teach to swim than women, but women are inclined to "take the notion" sooner. Most instructors agree this is probably due to man's innate desire to excel at all times. If they don't learn to swim when young, they take the path of least resistance later in life by avoiding the water entirely—rather than appear ridiculous, as they think, in the role of novice. Women, on the other hand, look forward to lessons with pleasure, especially if the instructor is big and handsome.

After women realize they have control over their feet and a little water in the face does not mean death by drowning or complexion ruin, the instructor's chief difficulties have been passed. He can begin actual lessons, and soon his pupils are swimming like the proverbial ducks.

Dog Knows His Fish.

Block Island, R. I., (U.P.).—Mutt, mongrel dog, is as good a fisherman as ever you would want to meet, said Capt. Earl Littlefield, owner. When the dog sights a swordfish he keeps perfectly quiet, but when he sights a shark he howls until the fish disappears.

Beards Get A "No" Vote By Women

Romance and Whiskers Are Incompatible, Say Beauty Operators.

Blond and Red Mustaches Are Considered a Capital Offense.

MEN should be capable of growing beards. But they'd better not risk wearing them, unless they want to shiver in the concentrated chill of feminine cold shoulders the country over.

Mustaches? Well, they're all right for Frenchmen, and romantic on movie stars of the Clark Gable, William Powell and John Boles types, but blonde young men who affect them should be chloroformed.

That's the way they put it, those more than 20 pretty cosmeticians who waxed indignant over the vocalized whiskerings of Joseph Harris, veteran barber of Ogden, Utah. Barber Harris, recently announced that modern women, like their sisters of '48, prefer bewhiskered men. Said he:

"Even today, a stocky growth of whiskers denotes real manhood and romance to members of the 'weaker sex,' although they won't admit it. Women still feel, down deep in their hearts, just as the actresses of '48 did, that a kiss without a beard is nothing, but one with a full beard is heaven."

Smooth Kisses Wanted.

"What women with a perfect make up could tolerate the osculatory advances of an impetuous brush heap?" demanded pretty Miss Cullen, of the Emile, Jr., shop. "Women of today don't want a sticky, scratchy massage palmed off in the name of romance. The popular kiss is the clean-shaven sanitary one."

Unlike H. L. Mencken, who maintains whiskers give men individuality, Miss Christine Bragdon, of the Warner Beauty Studio, maintains they make all men look alike.

"Look at the House of David baseball team," she suggested. "Their beards have the effect of a uniform. There's not an individual looking player in the carload."

Young romance and beards just don't mix, according to Dorothy, of "Charles," at the Shoreham.

"The freshness and cleanness of youth is lost behind a shaggy facial growth," she opined.

If beards can be reconciled with cleanliness, women wil raise no objection to them, declared Lucas in his Connecticut avenue shop recently. For the latter, he said, is one of the prime feminine demands today.

"No clever woman, however, goes on looks alone," he declared, "because by so doing she would be ignoring other important factors in the masculine make-up."

A Compromise Trade.

Virginia, at Gabriel's, struck a compromising note when she suggested that beards should be taken seriously, if taken at all. Moustaches, she said, should be "applied" with psychological skill.

"They could have their place in masculine beauty culture, as the hair wave in feminine make-up," she said. "They could serve the important purpose of distracting attention to blemishes, and throwing the emphasis on good points. Whiskers can hide a multitude of weak chins."

Then there were Sally, Jeanette and Harriet, whose trio of laughridden comments at Daniele, Inc., Beauty Salon at the Wardman Park, would have enlivened a sprightly vaudeville sketch.

"If we must have moustaches, give us Clark Gable, John Boles and William Powell," said brunette Harriet.

"Frenchmen and Spaniards are incomplete without them, so, of course we'd accept them, too," chimed in blond Sally. "Beards are all right on the screen, especially when they fit the character. But I wouldn't advise any girl to get in close touch with them."

"Blond men with mustache-growing tendencies should be chloroformed," contributed auburn-haired Jeanette, and added, "red-haired men with like inclinations should be cremated."

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If August 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m.

It might be advisable to exercise a great deal of care in making business decisions on this date. Be cautious in your dealings with strangers. There is a possibility of a money making opportunity coming your way, which you may overlook unless you keep both eyes wide open. It might prove a good policy to avoid forming an alliance with a business competitor, if such a thing is suggested, for the purpose of negotiating a transaction involving a considerable amount of money. Social activities should be confined to inexpensive forms of entertainment, otherwise criticisms which might hurt, may follow if lavishness is indulged in.

If a woman and August 27 is your birthday, your unusually active mentality requires an absorbing subject to keep it occupied. If you will specialize on some particular subject you may find it will provide material sufficient for numerous articles suitable for either magazine or newspaper publications. Historical research work might prove a wonderful field of activity and the knowledge gained might be turned into hard cash, if converted into romantic historical tales. You should be very fortunate in the selection of a mate, and your domestic life should be productive of a great deal of happiness, providing you do not allow "in-laws" to interfere.

If a man and August 27 is your natal day, the painter's brush or the pen should prove the instruments through which fame might be gained. Endowed with a versatile brain you should have an unlimited fund of interesting subjects to draw from, which should enable you to be an entertaining speaker. If you seek happiness in domestic affairs, avoid consulting anyone regarding them, excepting your wife. In financial matters you should prosper, providing you avoid speculative ventures.

"Four Bottles Helped Me"

Feels Fine... Never Tired

"My four children were born close together. I lived on a farm with lots of work to do and I got all rundown so I could hardly go. Four bottles of your Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully. Twice since then I had to take several bottles to regulate and strengthen me. I take care of my house and children, do all my laundry and do home work for a garment factory, and I feel fine and never get tired. I have also used the Sanative Wash and it relieved my trouble."—Mrs. Chas. S. Pittinger, 55 Conklin Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Max Schmeling Knocks Out Neusel Starting Heavy Title Comeback

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

IN a city where nearly 2,000,000 Jews are among the potential cash customers, it is indeed surprising that the New York Yankees are content to operate without at least one Hebraic name in their line-up. Or maybe baseball is more of a sport than a business with Col. Jake Ruppert.

That latter item would be one of the two explanations. The other is that there aren't enough good Jewish ball players to go around. But the Yankees' rivals for New York patronage, the Giants, have been keeping a weather eye open for Jewish players ever since the late John McGraw won the backing of the city's Hebrew population a dozen years ago by the simple statement that what the Giants needed was a good Jewish ball player.

The Giants picked up a chap by the acceptable name of Andy Cohen a few years ago in an attempt to keep their face with the 1,765,000 Jews of the city and incidentally gladdened the keeper of the club exchequer, until Cohen went into such a prolonged slump that he was scaring his co-religionists away form the ball park. They had to get rid of Cohen.

But they've picked up a couple of other Jewish ball players of late. Ike Danning, a second-string catcher, has been with the club for two years, but a second-tion of many of the 1,765,000, so there was not much percentage there for the Giants. Anyway, a name like Danning was bound to occasion misgivings.

A month or so ago, the Giants came up with another young Hebrew by the more fitting name of Phil Weintraub and young Weintraub, who plays the outfield, has already begun to set the hearts of Jewish fans a-flutter with his batting average that at this writing leads all the other Giants.

But the Yanks haven't so much as even turned up a rookie even of Jewish extraction. One look at the chain of Ruppert breweries that encircles Manhattan completely, and there can be no doubt of Col. Ruppert's business acumen. Maybe, when Babe Ruth departs at the end of the season and the Yanks need a drawing card, Ruppert will exploit a Jewish ball player if he can be found.

Detroit turned up with First-Baseman Hank Greenberg, whose big bat has been a potent factor in the pennant rush of the Tigers, and the irony of it is that he is a Bronx boy, plucked from under the very nose of Ruppert, who had a chance to sign Greenberg that he didn't exercise.

The comparative scarcity of Jewish ball players this department can attribute to only one cause. At the age when Tom, Dick and Harry are out on the corner lot playing one-old-cat and breaking in their new gloves, the young Jew is working in Papa's store, or otherwise occupied in gainful pursuit in an attempt to keep down the overhead.

But the inevitable fact remains that good Jewish ball players are as scarce as nudists in Lapland.

And there's a story, too, to the gradual replacement of the Irish in big league baseball. With the Dutch, the Irish comprised 90 per cent of the makeup of big league teams before the turn of the century, but an easily-recognizable influx of Italians, Slavs and Polaks are crowding the sons of Erin out of the line-ups. The Dutch and Germans, though, are still hanging on.

The explanation may be that the Irish who made up the rosters of ball teams back in the nineties and the early 1900's were the issue of the first generation of immigrants, devoid of trades or professions and with baseball affording them an immediate income.

But the second generation of these Irish immigrants found it easier to adopt the professions. Into law, medicine and politics they piled, thus cutting down the supply of Irish baseball stock. The Delehantys, the Hanlons, the Walshes, the Sullivans, the Donovans, the Dineens and the McGraws have been supplanted by the Lazzeris, the Crosettis, the Bonuras, the Szymanskis and the Vosmiks and Kuhels.

Grimm Will Lead Cubs Again in '35

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Ending rumors that the Cubs manager was slated for the discard, President William Walker today announced that Charlie Grimm had been re-appointed manager for 1935. The announcement was made just before the Cubs took the field for the first game of a series of four with their arch foes, the Giants.

Rumor filtered throughout Cub fandom last week that it was likely Grimm was to be replaced when he made a trip to St. Louis while the Cubs were playing at home. Varying reports as to his reason for going to St. Louis gave rise to the rumors.

Bass Held 2-1 Choice Over Sarron

Quaker's Punch Expected to Wear Down Syrian Tonight.

Sarron Counts on Bass Being Weakened Making 129 Pounds.

By Bill McCormick.

GROOMED into the finest physical fettle of their careers, Benny Bass and Pete Sarron, two of the best little fighters in the ring today, will scramble between the ropes at Griffith Stadium tonight for a ten-round battle that will send one of them hurtling from the top rungs of the fistic ladder and zoom the other to within reach of a championship.

By virtue of a potent right hand that has leveled into the resin dust such luminaries as Dominick Petrone, Davey Abad, Tod Morgan, Eddie Mack, Jack Portney, Eddie Anderson and Bud Taylor, among others, Bass has been established a 2-to-1 betting favorite to do the zooming at the expense of the Syrian Sazerac, but the supporters of Sarron are legion.

The Philadelphia Fish's backers contend that no featherweight can hope to withstand the battering punches of the sixth ranking lightweight, especially Sarron, who is practically punchless and must depend upon his unorthodox style and dazzling speed for victory. They point out that Bass boxes well enough to have taken decisions from Chick Suggs, Lew Massey, Joe Ghnouly, Eddie Cool, Tony Falco and Harry Dublinsky and to have extended Tony Canzoneri to his limit to take two decisions.

Pete Sarron Clever.

The believers in Sarron remain adamant in their contention that the Syrian Sizzler will completely bewilder the Philadelphia sensation with his superior speed and pinwheel tactics. They claim that Sarron always has shown to best advantage against "one-punch" artists, such as Bass, pointing to Sarron's recent easy win over Al Foreman as an example.

The hopes of Sarron have been further bolstered by the difficulty experienced by Bass in making the 129-pound weight limit agreed upon. So difficult has it been for the Philadelphia Flash to whittle down to the required poundage that he found it necessary to remain in Philadelphia for training until late last night, instead of winding up his conditioning here, as planned.

The former featherweight and junior lightweight champion arrived here vowing vengeance for the trouble to which he had been put in making the weight, declaring he had made the weight and would celebrate by knocking out Sarron.

"I've sedom had to make weight for anybody," Bennah admitted. "If I hadn't hadda pretty good idea I could put Sarron away regardless, I'd never have agreed to hit 129 for him. I don't like guys who haggle over a few pounds. I've never been a squawker myself and I'll be ready to do my talking with a right hand tomorrow night."

Sarron Down to Weight.

Sarron has experienced no difficulty in making the weight limit. He is expected to tip the beam at 127 or 128 this afternoon and to be at his strongest for the fracas. He is gunning for a shot at Freddy Miller's N. B. A. featherweight championship or the New York State featherweight title to be decided in Gotham this week between Mike Belloise and Baby Arizmendi. Taylor and Gunnis, Philadelphia promoters, will seek to match Bass with Dual Champion Barney Ross for the lightweight title, if he gets over Sarron.

Great interest attaches to the appearance of Eddie Hogan, of Waterbury, Conn., in an eight-round semifinal. Hogan, who has been selected by both Tommy Loughran and Gene Tunney as a championship prospect, will be opposed by Chester Matan, a rugged trial horse from New York. A 216-pounder, Hogan manuevers about the ring with great ease and grace for a big fellow and punches in a manner to belie his boxing ability.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (excellent) to G (horrible).

Main event—Benny Bass, Philadelphia, vs. Pete Sarron, Birmingham, lightweights. Ten rounds. Rated B plus. This one is accorded the highest rating ever given any bout in these columns because it has everything—color, class and punch—and anything might happen. The former featherweight and junior lightweight champion has been installed a 2-to-1 favorite to beat Sarron, but we like the Birmingham Buzz Saw to outsmart Bass.

Semifinal—Eddie Hogan, Waterbury, Conn., vs. Chester Matan, New York, Heavyweights. Eight rounds. Rated D. Washington will get its first glimpse of a potential heavyweight champion in Hogan, and Matan is rugged enough to give him a good workout before being stopped. Billy Duffy's new protege should put the anore on Matan in about six rounds.

Preliminaries—Joe Green, Washington, vs. Joe Gorman, Norfolk, featherweights. Six rounds. Rated C. Green is used to the big gloves and the crowds that bothered him in his legal-boxing debut on the Rinko-Brown card, when Pete Powell decisioned him. Although Gorman just finished shellacking Powell in Richmond, we like Green to win.

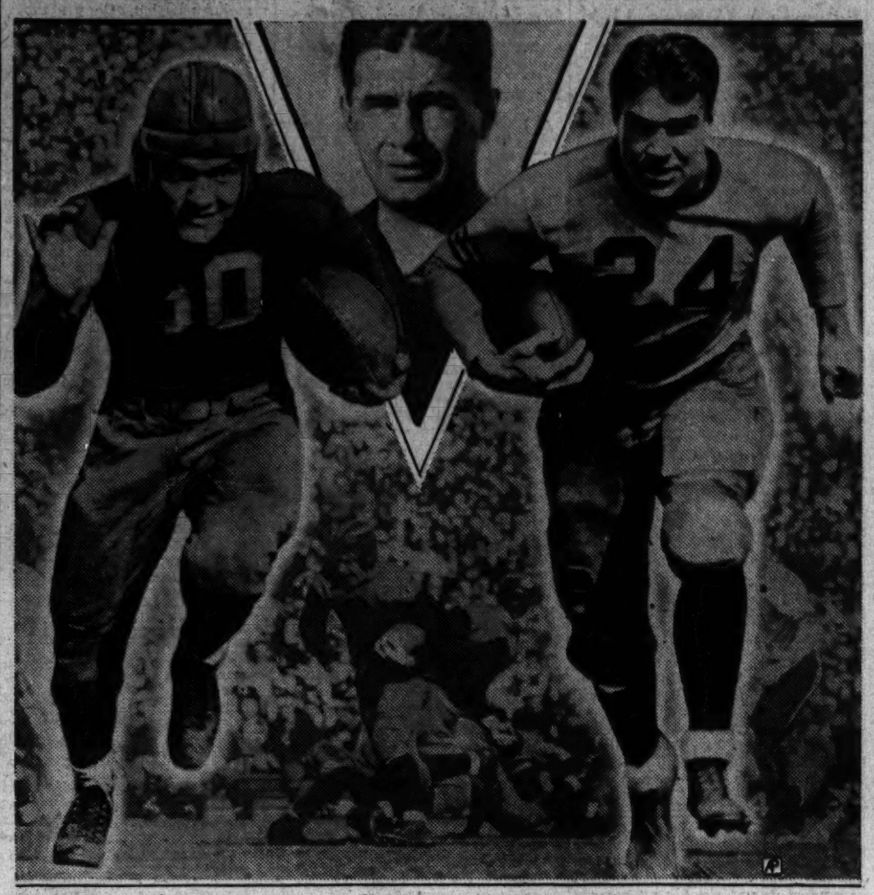
Bob Turner, Norfolk, vs. Otto Kushmer, Florida, middleweights. Six rounds. Rated D. If Turner is in shape to fight his fight, this one deserves a much higher rating. He should win anyway.

Wild Bill Howell, Washington, vs. Tony Uraine, Washington, welterweights. Four rounds. Rated C. For lovers of "club bouts" this should prove a classic, as was their last meeting at Fortner's. It all depends upon who gets home the first knockout punch, but it should be Howell.

Takoma-Bethesda Split.

The Takoma Northerns yesterday dropped the first game of a double-header to Bethesda and then gained an even break by taking the second, 7 to 5.

Stars of Past and Present to Clash



Football hysteria has started early in the Middlewest, where the pick of last season's all-America intercollegiate players will meet the Chicago Bears, National professional champions, August 31. The game will be played in Chicago's famed Soldiers Field. Jack Manders (right), former Minnesota star, and now a member of the Bears, and Mike Sebastian (left), Pittsburgh's great running back, are only two of the players who will take part in this unusual battle. Noble Kizer (above), Purdue athletic director and coach, is in charge of the collegians.

Kozeluh Bows To Nusslein In Final

German Stylist Mounts Pro Tennis Throne, 6-4, 6-2, 1-6, 7-5.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26 (AP).—Hans Nusslein, sturdy German world's professional titleholder, today added the National pro championship to his collection when he scored an outstanding victory in the finals over a perennial rival, Karel Kozeluh, Czechoslovakian star, 6—4, 6—2, 1—6, 7—5.

By defeating Kozeluh, Nusslein reversed the decision of two years ago when the spry little Czech vanquished him on the same scene by overwhleming scores.

The winner played careful tennis, preferring to score the majority of his points from the base line or by Kozeluh's netted shots. He came to net only when a killing shot was in prospect or after he had attempted to draw Kozeluh out of court. On these occasions he sliced into corners where his shots bounded off into unattainable spots.

After Nusslein had won the first two sets at 6—4 by turning back every threat Kozeluh was able to offer, the Czech chopped, sliced and drove his way to a typical 6—1 Kozeluh triumph in the third.

In the final set the 1932 champ attempted desperately to avert disaster but the accurate, forceful stroking of the German stylist proved too potent. Both thrilled the South Shore Country Club gallery of 3,500 with their lengthy rallying sessions, the ball going from raquet to racquet 81 times on one occasion until Nusslein drove out an unreturnable shot.

Tabulations showed that Nusslein scored 27 nets, 64 outs and 32 placements, while the loser netted 28 times, hit out of court 61 times and made 17 placements.

Bruce Barnes, St. Louis, Mo., and Emmett Pare, Memphis, Tenn., won the doubles title when they defeated the Ellsworth Vines-Paul Heston combination in straight sets, 6—1, 6—4, 7—5. The 1933 title was held by Vinnie Richards and Charlie Wood, whom Vines and Heston had eliminated in the semifinals.

Cliff Sutter Gains Third Round in Rye Net Play

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP).—Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans and Bronxville, N. Y., gained the third round of the Eastern Grass Court tennis championships today, scoring over Frank Goeltz, of Scranton, Pa., 6—4, 9—7. Sutter holds two legs on the championship bowl and is seeking to retire it from competition.

Donald Budge and Gene Mako, youthful Californians, scored love victories in the first round, the former defeating John S. Tilney, of Orange, N. J., and Mako eliminating J. G. Gibbons, of Greenwich, Conn.

Lack of Breeze Prevents Cup Tryout

Old - Fashioned Yankee Has Better Record Than Rainbow.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 26 (AP).—Absence of a breeze gave the surviving candidates for the defense of the America's cup—Yankee and Rainbow—a respite today. The scheduled contest between the two boats was called off after the race committee attempted to measure a nonexistent wind.

Owing to the elimination of Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, beaten in three successive races in the final trials, only the Boston boat, Yankee, sailed by Charles Francis Adams, and Rainbow, owned by a millionaires' syndicate headed by Harold S. Vanderbilt, remain in the competition for the honor and responsibility of defending the cup against Tom Sopwith's British endeavour.

Reach Crucial Stage.

The trials have reached a crucial stage now. Yankee has beaten both Weetamore and Rainbow in the final trials and has suffered no defeat. Her long string of victories during the earlier observation races combine to put her far ahead in the defense quest. Her success to date has been interpreted in some quarters as a vindication of the old-fashioned principles of yacht designing, including her Wooden mast, compared with rainbow, equipped with the latest notions in mechanical appliances, bending boom and hollow mast.

Republicans and Democrats Share Dubious Links Honors

POLITICAL honors were even in the Turf Club tournament held at the Bannockburn Golf Club yesterday, with Stephen Early, secretary to the President, and Warren Wheaton, publicity director of the Republican National campaign committee, deadlocked at 94 strokes for low gross in the annual affair sponsored by the National Press Club. The only landslide in the tournament occurred on the fourth hole when Eddie Folliard undermined a hill in taking 17 strokes which won him a special prize for the most number of strokes on a single hole.

Fred Perkins won the elegant vessel yclept, the J. E. Barnes Trophy, with 96—13—83 for low net. Harry Helwigg was runner-up for the Barnes award with 106—22—84.

High gross was captured by Fred Ironsides, who shot 169 to nose out Folliard, whose 167—25—142 won him only the high net award. It was a nip and tuck battle all the way, but Old Ironsides kept firing and firing, wearing Folliard to a state of exhaustion in which he was too feeble to swing his club more than ten times on each of the last three holes.

The flight awards were garnered by Mike Gallagher in the first flight; Bob King, in the second; Eugene Leggett in the third, and William C. Murphy, jr., in the fourth.

In the kibitzer-caddy competition, Julius Reiners walked away with top honors for the best-dressed; Aubrey Taylor was declared the handsomest; Tom Kingsbury, the most short-winded; Harry Ward, the loudest. Sid Houston obtained the highest efficiency rating by carrying ten players back to the club house for resuscitation.

and Gehringer followed with a double that won the ball game.

Greenberg's mighty home-run smash into the upper seaches of the left field stands put the Tigers ahead in the seventh, only to have the Mackmen tie the tally in their half of the inning.

Nats Beaten Twice by Browns

Blaeholder Yields But Two Hits to Win Opener, 3 to 0.

Benson Routed in Second; Nat Rally Fails; Score Is 9 to 5.

the first and Elder Al Benson betook his whiskers to safer precincts in the second. Thomas surrendered only three runs and eight hits during his six-inning workout, but the Brownies needed only one run with Blaeholder winging them over.

Benson's camouflage failed to save him from a withering sweep of St. Louis hits, ten in all, that brought over five runs and drove him to cover before a man had been retired in the third inning. The old sagebrush simply didn't have what it takes yesterday. The Browns rapped everything and anything he tossed at them—good, solid smashes.

Fred Schulte got the first hit off Blaeholder in the inaugural, a single to left, in the second inning, and Cecil Travis, pinch-hitting for Thomas, tapped the second, another single past first in the sixth. Schulte was left on first, but Bob Burke, who ran for the lame Travis, got around to third before being abandoned. Blaeholder passed two men and struck out four.

Clift opened for St. Louis with a single to center, but was forced at second by Sam West. Burns bowled another single to right, West pulling up at third, and Garms shoved a double to the same field, scoring Sammy and putting Burns on third. The latter scored on Campbell's roller to Myer.

A pass to Clift and singles by West and Garms went into the manufacture of the third and final run.

Washington's ninth-inning uprising in the second game started innocently enough as Susko, the first batter, drilled a single to left. Luke Sewell hit into what appeared to be a double play, but the ump overlooked that little foot Burns stamped on first, and called him safe, but Pete was out at second.

Bluege slammed his second hit of the afternoon to center, and Sewell stopped at second. Then stocky Clif Bolton came up as a pinch-hitter and proceeded to smack one to center, scoring Sewell and placing Bluege on third.

Myer and Stone followed with one-baggers that scored Bolton and Stone, and old Dave Harris pounded a double to center that brought Bud and Johnny skidding over the pan with the fourth and fifth runs. Cronin and Schulte went out in order thereafter.

St. Louis clinched the honors in the third when Clift doubled, West, Burns, Garms and Campbell singled in succession, Benson unloosed a wild pitch and three runs clattered over the dishpan. McColl came in to confront Melillo and the little St. Louisan popped up to Susko.

But Grube rapped another to center, scoring Garms, and Campbell skipped in on Strange's fly to Schulte. The Browns got one in the first on consecutive hits by Clift, West, and Burns, and another in the second on singles by Melillo and Grube and a double-play. Benson was shaky from the start and it was only a question of when he'd blow.

The two runs they collected in the fifth on a conglomeration of three hits, a walk and error, were entirely unnecessary. Clift, Hornsby's rookie find, was a prime factor in every rally and got four hits in five trips to the plate.

Tomorrow it will be "Way Down East;" far enough down, I hope, to avoid annoying you.

"Blues" Rally To Win Polo Match

Phipps Scores 8 Goals to Bring Team Closer to East - West Play.

Port Washington, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP).—Led by Mike Phipps, who scored eight goals at No. 1, the youthful "Blues" strengthened their chances of being the Eastern quartet in the coming East-West polo series by whipping Earle Hopping's "Whites," 13 to 9, in an exciting eight-chukker match today.

It was not until the seventh period that the combination of Phipps, Jimmy Mills, Ebby Gerry and Billy Post gained a commanding lead in a ding-dong battle. As a consequence, this line-up now seems slated to start for the East in the opening match against the West, September 8, unless Tommy Hitchcock recovers sufficiently from a concussion to supplant Gerry at No. 3.

Hitchcock's status still is a mystery, but he has not practiced in nearly three weeks and it appears now he may not return to action.

Hopping was tossed from his pony in the first period, but was unhurt. Mills added a novel touch by hitting a goal for each side in the fourth period, he sliced the ball through his own goal trying to make a save.

Morvillars Scores Win In Deauville Grand Prix

Deauville, France, Aug. 26 (AP).—Edouard Jonas' Morvillars today won the Grand Prix, climax of the racing season, defeating Andre Schwob's Formasterius by a length and a half. H. Landon's Foulaubin was third. The winner paid 54 francs for 5 in the betting. The purse was 200,000 francs (about $13,400).

Ostend, Aug. 26 (AP).—Lord Woolavington's Easton, ridden by Gordon Richards, today won the Grand Prix by three lengths from Leon Volterra's Admiral Drake. Pierre Wertheimer's Rentenmark was third and M. C. Schwab's Bilbao fourth.

in the second round and a bad one over Walter's right eye in the fourth.

Neusel, looking clumsy against Schmeling's smart and skillful boxing, took terrific punishment from the start. He was completely exhausted at the end of the eighth round and could not come out for the ninth.

Neusel Wades In.

Schmeling weighed 193.8 pounds; Neusel, 198.

It was Neusel's wide-open style plus his overly impetuous efforts for an early knockout that brought about the youngster's downfall.

Tossing caution to the winds, Neusel waded in with his wild swings, leaving himself wide open to Schmeling's short, jolting lefts and rights to the body. Max set himself from the beginning to play a defensive game. Coolly he let Neusel drive him into the ropes repeatedly and then let drive with heavy rights over Walter's heart.

Schmeling's tactics became apparent in the first round, when he made no effort to force the fighting. Confidently Neusel stepped into his more experienced foe and landed a few punches at the expense of punishing left hooks to the body. Through the next three rounds Schmeling laid back, waiting for openings through which to slip short, but sharp, wallops to the blond's body. Schmeling took his worst punishment in the fourth round, but even then he was wearing Neusel down rapidly with his relentless body attack.

By the time the seventh round rolled around, Neusel obviously was tiring. He was breathing hard, but still trying desperately for a knockout. Schmeling calmly and efficiently warded off his rival's wings and burrowed in at every oppor-

The Washington Post Baseball Association Results and League Standings

Millers Win, 6 to 0, Over Printers

Blue Flames and Blue Coals Are Among Other Victors.

UNDER lowering skies and despite a continual threat of rain, the teams of the National City League of The Post Association took the field yesterday in games that ended up for some teams with results as dismal as the day itself. The Union Printers nine, which had been undefeated until yesterday in the second half series, went down before the Miller Furniture nine by the score of 6 to 0.

In the other games of Section B, Blue Flame Valet nine, by inflicting a 12-to-9 defeat on the Warwicks assured itself of no worse than a tie for the second half.

Rinaldi Coalmen behind the steady hurling of Mickey McDonald, made it hot for the Griffith's Blue Coal nine, when they came out on top by the score of 5 to 2. Manager Willie Glascoe announced at the field that he intended to protest this game on the grounds that Rinaldi had used ineligible players.

In Section A, the leading Pig 'n' Whistle kept its slate undefeated when it overcame the Gordon's Cafeteria nine by a 6-to-0 score. Congress Heights was enabled to cling to its runner-up position without the formality of playing a game when Wash B. Williams nine failed to appear for its scheduled game.

"Lefty" George Wood, pitching his best game of the season, was a little too much for the Union Printers, who were able to garner out widely scattered bingles off the Miller southpaw. Wood was aided materially by uniformly good support by his infielders who were kept busy all afternoon handling difficult chances. The Furnituremen were able to garner but 7 blows off the pitching of George Mosedale, who pitched well enough to win an ordinary game. However, four of these seven hits were for extra bases and were inserted at opportune moments. Fuzzy Homan, Printer thirdsacker, played a steady game throughout. This defeat knocked the Printers out of first place.

Valets Take Big Lead.

Tony Burrutto's Blue Flame Valet nine after being checked temporarily last week broke out into a raging fire yesterday when they overcame the Warwicks. Getting away to a 10-run lead in the first inning, the Blue Flame outfit was never seriously threatened though Warwicks, undaunted by the avalanche of runs in the first inning, kept plugging away at the huge lead.

The big explosion at the bat occurred when Ed Colliflower, Blue Flame slugger, came through with a homer with the bases loaded. An odd feature of the game was the fact that Charlie Mackie, Warwick southpaw, after walking seven men in the first inning, was taken out of the box and sent to first base where he remained the rest of the inning. He came out to hurl again for the second inning and he held his opponents pretty well in check after his wild start.

In Section A, Pig 'n' Whistle, behind the excellent pitching of Marcus Chaconas, veteran sandlotter, shut out the young Gordon's Cafeteria nine. It was a case of youth versus age in this game, and for once the old adage of "Youth Triumphant" failed to work out. Two innings, in each of which 3 runs were scored, were sufficient to turn the tide in the favor of the Barbecuemen. Fee Colliers and Latin led Hugh Waldrop's boys at the bat with two hits apiece. Chaconas allowed Gordons only four hits, two of which were garnered by Ed Devers, his pitching opponent.

Fielders Have Difficult Day As Virginia Loop Hitters Star

THE worm turned yesterday in games of the Northern Virginia League of The Post Association. Where last week, the games were pitching battles, yesterday was a field day for the batters. Base hits were slammed out with abandon and high scoring games were the rule.

In section A, the leading Middleburg nine tightened its hold on first place by beating Park Lane, 8 to 1. The runner-up Arlington Team kept on the trail of Middleburg by slamming out a 12-to-4 victory over McLean. Fairfax buried Falls Church under an avalanche of base-hits to finish on top by the score of 12 to 1.

In Section B, Ballston protected its half-game lead over Manassas by overcoming Herndon by the lopsided score of 13 to 2; Manassas, in the runner-up position, inflicted an 11-to-4 lacing on White Star. When Fort Myer failed to appear for its game with Clarendon, that team was awarded a 9-to-0 forfeit victory.

Rodney Furr, Middleburg hurling mainstay, in winning his eighth victory in nine league starts, set down Park Lane batters with seven scattered hits and struck out ten men. Furr's strikeout total for nine league games thus mounted to 83, giving him an average of over nine a game. Will Waddell's catch in the fourth was the fielding feature of the game. Burwell led the winners at bat with three bingles while Bilger was best for the losers with two.

In winning his eleventh straight game, Ed McPherson, Arlington twirler, allowed seven hits. McLean scored three runs in the third, but never threatened thereafter. Heady base running greatly aided Arlington in chalking up its victory. Bob Buckley, pitching his first game for Fairfax Station, in league competition, let the Falls Church nine down with two hits. Fairfax scored its runs in clusters of 3, 4, and 5. Riggles, Mahoney, and Buckley lead the winners' batting attack.

Ballston, finding the atmosphere of first place much to its liking, slugged out a 13-to-2 victory over the Herndon nine. Otis Printz held the strong Herndon club to four hits and struck out ten batters. Biggs, Spitzer and Printz each got three hits to lead the Ballston offensive. Rieding got on the bases six times out of as many times up, being hit by a pitched ball, walking three times and getting two hits. With the veteran IHke Dreyfuss in form, striking out 12 and getting three bingles along with Shorty Vetter, Manassas was returned the victor in a loosely played game. Saunders, Manassas left fielder, hit a homer.

North Washington Wins; Cark Stars

In the lone game on tap yesterday in the Montgomery County League North Washington triumphed over White Haven by the score of 4 to 2. The victory clinched second place honors in the final league standings for the winners.

Scoring all four of its runs in the fourth inning, North Washington was never headed, and behind the twirling of their ace moundsman, Charley Zimmerli, one of the best pitchers in The Post Association ranks, North Washington played a consistent game afield.

Randy Clark, North Washington second-sacker, was the outstanding player of the contest, handling 11 chances in the field without a slip-up and getoing 2 timely hits. Les Robey in a relief pitching role, turned in a fine perfromance, striking out 5 of the first 6 men to face him.

Mount Rainier Gains League Lead

Potomac A. C. Bows, 11-4; Kenilworth, Warehouse Clubs Tripmph.

THE tangled situation existing in the District Independent League of The Post Association, which found two teams tied for first place and four in a deadlock for second, somewhat unraveled itself as a result of yesterday's games.

The Mount Rainier Grays, by its brilliant 11-to-4 victory in 11 innings over Capital Heights, took possession of first place over the Potomac A. C., which had an open date. Kenilworth, by virtue of its 9-to-8 victory over Kenilworth broke its tie in the standings with that team. D. G. S. Warehouse nine broke into the win column today at the expense of the Postal A. C, by coming out on top in a pitcher's battle by a 2-to-1 score.

In a well-played game, featured by the snappy performances of both teams, Mount Rainier Grays regained their winning stride at the expense of the Capital Heights nine, and gained first place once more. Rising up in all their fury, the Grays, by virtue of a sensational 7-run batting attack in the eleventh put the game far beyond reach of the Heightsmen.

Capital Heights put itself into the ball game by scoring three runs in the fifth, but Bill Leggitt, Gray hurler, took complete control of the situation and struck out 13 men for his day's work. In addition, he put the game on ice in the eleventh when he singled with the bases full. Bay Moore, Mount Rainier second sacker had a perfect day at the bat with three hits in as many tries. Rawlins stood out for Capital Heights.

Ruppard Whiffs Ten.

In the game at Kenilworth, Ray Ruppard, after a shaky start pulled himself together and pitched a creditable game, ending up with ten strike-outs to his credit. Red Lyles, Kenilworth back-stop, had a big day at the bat, getting four out of five. Gibson supplied the fielding feature with a sensational catch. For the Government workers, Henry Quantrille was best.

In one of the best played games of the day, the D. G. S. Warehouse nine victimized the Postal A. C. The winners made but three hits off Weaver, but they all counted in the run making. Duvall, the winning pitcher, allowed but five bingles and was especially tight in the pinches. Doubles in the seventh by Rector and Dugan accounted for the D. G. S. runs.

Clarendon Nine Suffers First Defeat

Washington Maid Tossers Score 5-to-4 Upset in City League.

ALTHOUGH but one game was played yesterday in the junior class of the National City League, it resulted in a mild upset when Washington Maid nine discouraged the pennant plans of the Clarendon nine and inflicted upon them their first defeat of the second half by the score of 5 to 4.

The game was nip and tuck all the way and was not decided until the ninth inning, when Washington Maids overcame a 1-run Clarendon lead and went on to cop the ball game. Dawson, Russell and Bresnaham came through with the hits which brought about the downfall of the Clarendon nine.

Jack McIntosh, who defeated the Clarendon nine for their only loss in the first half series, again proved to be their nemesis when he set them down with 6 scattered hits and struck out 8 batters. Several sensational stops by Dawson aided him in tight spots. Darr and Milstead were in the limelight for Clarendon.

In the only other game scheduled yesterday in this class MacGruder A. C. was awarded a forfeit victory over the Washington A. C. when that team failed to appear. This victory, combined with the Clarendon loss, puts the MacGruder nine in first place by the margin of half a game. Washington Maids, by virtue of their win, went into a second place tie with Clarendon.

Groff Shines as D. C. Swimmers Stroke Way to Victory Over Baltimore

All-Stars Gain Jackson Cup In Close Meet

Capital Mermaids Lose All But Two Events in 59-51 Win.

THE weaker sex was actually weak yesterday so far as Washington's All-Star swimming team was concerned and it devolved upon the male members to prove themselves the better half, as it were, by carrying the Capital outfit to a narrow victory over a picked team of Baltimore's finest men and women swimmers at the Maryland Club Gardens pool.

The final score reads 59 points for Washington and 51 for Baltimore, but it does not show how a quiet, 21-year-old kid named George Groff helped turn back the Baltimore challenge with a prilliant individual performance such as seldom has been seen in local swimming competition.

Had it not been for the young University of Pennsylvania junior, swimming under the Shoreham colors, Washington would not today have one leg on the coveted Mayor Howard E. Jackson trophy on which Baltimore won the first leg last year. Three victories retire the cup.

Groff not only anchored both the winning free-style and medly relay teams but shattered all District marks for the 100-yard individual free-style by flashing the distance in 56 seconds flat. The Garden's pool is a short-course tank.

Washington started off the meet by unexpectedly winning the men's free-style relay by a hair's breadth and clinched the honors in the next-to-the-last event, the men's medley relay, by about the same margin. In both races it was Groff's terrific last-lap spurts which cut down the Baltimore challenges to win. The winning relay teams were awarded 5 points, to none for the losers.

The Capital team chalked up 16 points by taking first and second in both men's and women's diving, Joe Lymman, of the Gardens pool, winning the former, and Marie Duvall, of the Shoreham, the latter. Rita Augusterfer was the only other Washington girl to win a first place, taking the 220 free-style. Ann Bono, District 50-yard champion, raced home third in a blanket finish in the 100-yard free-style, helping to press Helen Alain, of Baltimore, to a new District record of 1:08.

Washington had not been given a chance to take the men's freestyle team event and when Groff took off for the last lap, the local outfit was 4 yards behind. Groff, however, caught up with and passed Homan Kingsley, the Baltimore anchor man, and won by a stroke in a finish nothing short of sensational.

With the point score 54 to 46, and the men's and women's medley relays to be run, Baltimore appeared a probable winner. It had been conceded the women's event and an even chance to win the men's. The Washington medley team of Bill Marmion, of the Y. M. C. A., at the back stroke, Dyer, of the Shoreham, swimming the breast stroke, and Groff the freestyle, won by a yard, as Groff again fought off Kinsley's closing spurt. The victory kept Baltimore from winning, 56 to 54, as the Marylanders proceeded to take the women's medley in fairly easy fashion.

Schmeling

tunity with a two-fisted attack directly mostly over Neusel's heart.

This terrific pounding suddenly took its full toll of rights and lefts. He could not floor the youngster, but Neusel was groggy when the bell sounded. He found his corner, but the frantic ministrations of his seconds, including his American representative, Jimmy Bronson, failed to revive him sufficiently to answer the bell for the ninth round.

Prince Among Fans.

Crown Prince Wilhelm was among the spectators making up the greatest boxing crowd in German history.

Adolf Witt retained the German light heavyweight title in one of the preliminaries by holding the challenger, Adolf Heuser, to a draw. Richard Stegeman outpointed Willie Kohler to retain the German lightweight championship.

Isadore Gastanaga, of Spain, and Hans Schoenrath, of Germany, fought ten slashing rounds, replete with knockdowns, to a draw in a heavyweight preliminary.

"Well, Imagine That," Is Comment of Baer

San Leandro, Calif., Aug. 26 (AP). "Well, can you imagine that," was Max Baer's response to word that Max Schmeling had stopped Walter Neusel at Hamburg today.

The heavyweight champion, who battered Schmeling into submission in New York to gain his successful shot at the title held by Primo Carnera, had picked Neusel to stop or outpoint the Black Uhlan of the Rhine.

Baer declined to discuss prospects for a bout with Schmeling.

Schmeling Plans New Campaign in America

Hamburg, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Max Schmeling who re-established himself in the heavyweight field by knocking out Walter Neusel today, will seek an early match in the United States, he said after the fight tonight.

"Tell America I've come back," he told the United Press. He was in perfect shape after the fight, while Neusel, his right eye nearly shut, claimed he had been unable to fight after Schmeling closed his eye in the second round.

Nats to Try Out Few Rookies This Fall

Pitcher Pettit Is Coming From Lookouts; Browns Here Again Today.

By Frank H. Young.

ALTHOUGH the 23-player limit restrictions in the American League will be automatically lifted on August 31, the Nats do no expect to bring many rookies here for fall inspection. "I had in mind looking over several of the Lookouts," said Manager Josephus Cronin yesterday, "but probably won't do so for two reasons. In the first place, we've still got an idea that we can horn into the first division, and the other reason is that Chattanooga has a chance to beat out New Orleans for second-half honors in the Southern. Naturally, we don't want to hurt is chances by taking away any of its stars."

Just what Lookouts the Nats have in mind for 1935 consideration are not known except in the case of Pitcher Leon Pettit. "Yeah," said Cronin, "he's an experienced left-hander who's setting the league afire this season, and I think he has a chance of making good with us. We'll take a look at him next month if the Lookouts falter in the race, and next spring if they don't. Pettit is about 28 years old, knows what it's all about, and I think he has a chance of making the grade with us."

Whitehill vs. Hadley Today.

Having overtaken the Nats by their double victory of yesterday, the pepped-up Browns are out to pass them this afternoon. If they do they will have to beat scrappy Earl Whitehill. Irving ("Bump") Hadley, former Nat, is due to do the flinging for the aliens.

President Clark Griffith and Secretary Eddie Eynon turned Nat scouts yesterday and donned false whiskers and heavy black glasses and went to Baltimore to watch the Albany Club play the Orioles. The Nats have a working agreement with Albany, and probably will take a look at some of its stars next spring.

Pitcher Ed (Missing) Linke is still resting his pitching arm, his case still proving a puzzle to the raft of medicine men who have tried to figure out why the blood refuses to circulate properly. Three high muck-a-mucks from Johns Hopkins came to Washington and examined the wing Saturday afternoon. All they did after looking and asking a few questions was to solemnly shake their heads and return to Baltimore.

"As a matter of fact," quoted Ed yesterday, "the medicial profession is taking such an interest in my case that I'm considering charging the doctors, instead of paying them, for looking at it."

Breaks for Garms, Travis.

The Browns benefitted from quite a break in the fifth of the opener when, with a double-play in sight, Grams' bounder to Cronin took a bad hop and skidded over the short-stop's head. It was responsible for the alien run scored in that round.

And, in the sixth, Pinch-hitter Cecil Travis benefitted in the same manner, his bounder skipping over Burns' head by a matter of inches. It was only the second native hit of the game.

Harlan Clift, the Browns' rookie third-sacker, in addition to cracking out four safeties in a row in the nightcap, also contributed the fielding gem of the contest, if it could be called that, when he made a "can't be done" running overhead grab of Sewell's foul in the second.

Front Royal Stars Win.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.). The All-Stars swamped the Washington County (Md.) All-Stars here this afternoon, 16 to 2. The locals collected 13 hits and were aided by 11 passes and loose fielding on the part of the visitors. Johnson, Jewett, and Pearson divided hurling duties for the Stars while Williams and Shipley performed for the visitors.

Lack of Breeze Halts Lewes Yacht Race

LEWES, Del., Aug. 26 (Spl.). Twelve entrants in the Lewes Yacht Club handicap class weekly race got underway this afternoon with a promising start, only to encounter an outgoing tide and a spotty breeze which died down to practically nothing, resulting in a "no race" ruling by the racing committee. The fleet made such slow headway that it was seen the first lap of the triangular course would not be covered in the required time of one hour.

As anticipated, no boat had even made the outer buoy when the 45-minute gun was fired. The Extra Dry, of W. Virden Burton, Lewes, holder of highest standing points for the season; the D. Jay, of Lieut. Justus B. Naylor, and the Dipper, of George Fleming, Ardmore, kept the lead over all entries, leaving the others becalmed around Buoy No. 1.

A special race around the inner breakwater, a 7-mile course, will be held next Saturday, for which a trophy is offered by Rear Commodore George Chambers and Frank S. Carter, sr., of Lewes.

Frank S. Carter, jr., the Skippy's owner, won this race last season.

Commodore Reese, of Wilmington, is offering a trophy to the winner of second place in the season's regattas, a large pewter bowl and the Henlopen Trophy, put up by W. S. Grenoble, of Rehobeth and Pittsburgh, will go to the winner of highest points.

The most promising contenders for the high trophy are the Extra Dry, Skippy and Dipper, with points to date: 75½, 73 and 71½, respectively.

Two more races on September 2 and 3 will close the season.

Cardinals, Dodgers Split Double-Header

St. Louis, Aug. 26 (AP).—Brooklyn's Dodgers came to St. Louis today and greeted the Cardinals with a hitting splurge in the first inning of a double-header that produced six runs and enabled them to win the first game, 11 to 5, only to have the tables turned in the sunset edition, which they lost to the home team, 7 to 2.

The Cardinals opened the scoring in the second game with a first-inning run, made another two frames later and maintained their safe lead.

Gehrig Hits 3 Homers; Yanks Win Pair

Victories Over Chisox, 9-5, 2-0, Cut Tigers' Margin to 4½ Games.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26 (AP).—Lou Gehrig's bat carried the Yankees to a double victory over the Chicago White Sox today, 9 to 5 and 2 to 0, as he walloped three home runs to bring his season's total up to 42. The double victory chopped a half game off Detroit's lead, leaving the Yankees 4½ games behind.

Gehrig poled his first two homers in the opening contest, and his third broke up a mound duel between Charley Ruffing and Les Tietje in the afterpiece. The trio put him four ahead of Jimmie Foxx in the race for major league honors and a couple of days in front of Babe Ruth's famous 1927 record pace.

22d for Lefty Gomez.

Lefty Gomez got credit for his twenty-second victory in the opener, although he failed to finish, while Ruffing set the Sox down with three hits in the second game.

Red Sox, Indians Divide Twin Bill

Boston, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox and the Cleveland Indians divided honors in their fight for third place in the American League by splitting a double-header today, the visitors squeezing out a 3 to 2 win in the opener and the Sox taking the second game, 5 to 2. A crowd of 17,833 watched the games.

The Indians hopped on Pitcher Wes Ferrell for three runs in the first inning of the first game. Averill, Trosky, Burnett, Knickerbocker and Berg singled to score all of Cleveland's runs of the game.

The Sox did all their scoring in the fourth inning when Solters and Porter singled and crossed the plate after Catcher Rick Ferrell banged out a two-bagger. Hildebrand held the home team to seven hits, six of them singles.

Fred Ostermueller held Cleveland to nine hits in the nightcap while his teammates nicked Mel Harder for an even dozen.

With the score tied at 2 all, the Red Sox settled the outcome of the game in the seventh inning with a three-run rally.

Cotton Prices Close Higher As Week Ends

Middling Reaches Average of 13.24 Cents; Mill Buying Moderate.

Cotton prices continued the decline of last week through Saturday, fluctuated rather widely during the remainder of the week and closed on Friday about 15 points higher than on August 17.

Unfavorable price factors included limited inquiries for spot cotton, reduced exports, threatened labor troubles, and rain in some sections of the drought area of the Western Cotton Belt.

Offsetting factors included the small indicated crop, the announcement of the 12-cent loan on farmers' cotton by the Commodity Credit Corporation, firm cloth prices, and increased prices of securities and of certain commodities.

Prices Slightly Higher.

The average price for Middling seven-eighths inch cotton in the ten designated markets on August 24 was 13.24 cents, compared with 13.09 cents on August 17 and 9.26 cents on the corresponding day last season.

Grade premiums and discounts on August 24 were the same as for the closing day of the previous week with the ten market average for white good middling and strict middling 48 and 33 points more than middling, and for white strict low middling and low middling 40 and 81 points less than middling. The six quoting market average premium for middling fifteen-sixteenths of an inch was increased from 20 to 27 points and for 1 inch from 63 to 73 points more than middling seven-eighths.

In the Memphis market, the quoted premium for 1 1-16 inches was unchanged from the previous week at 100, 1⅛ and 1 3-16 inches were each reduced 5 points to 155 and 280 points on middling seven-eighth.

Offerings Continue Limited.

The reduced crop this season, along with some delay in the completion of crop control measures, and the announcement of the 12-cent loan this week by the Commodity Credit Corporation, are reported to have limited somewhat offerings of spot cotton this week.

While reported sales in the ten designated spot markets for the week amounted to about 80,000 bales, were more than double those of the previous week, they were much smaller than for the corresponding week a year ago and below the volume usual at this stage of the season.

Ginnings prior to August 16 of this season, amounting to 354,000 bales or about 3.9 per cent of the estimated crop, although considerably under the total for the corresponding period last season, compare with an average of 336,000 bales or 2.4 per cent of the average annual ginnings during the five-year period ending 1933-34.

In the New England mill territory buying activity of raw cotton for prompt shipment was reported as limited, but inquiries for deferred shipment were reported as somewhat increased compared with the previous week, particularly for cotton suitable for tire fabric manufacture.

In the Southern mill territory inquiries for raw cotton were reported as few for either prompt or deferred shipment, with manufacturers evidencing very little interest in raw cotton.

Lack of interest in raw cotton was attributed to uncertainties in the cotton textile labor situation.

Cloth Moderately Active.

Cotton cloth prices were firm this week with the volume of sales reduced from the two previous weeks of increased activity. Sales were again largest in those kinds of cloth in which Government relief purchases have been made or are anticipated by the trade. Threatened labor troubles are said to have caused some increased purchase of cotton goods, although sales of both fine and industrial fabrics were slow. Retail sales of cotton goods are being fairly well maintained, according to trade reports.

Foreign inquiries for American cotton were reported about as numerous as during the previous week, and more numerous than two weeks ago. Buyers for English accounts were the most active. Inquiries for shipments to Japan and China were again reported few, with inquiries for freight space for prompt and deferred sailings to Japan and China small. Exports from August 1 to August 24 amounted to 175,000 bales, compared with 408,000 bales for the corresponding period last season.

Exports to Japan and China so far this season amount to about 50,000 bales, compared with 114,000 bales a year ago for the corresponding period. Exports of Indian cotton to Japan and China from August 1 to August 16, amounted to 45,000 bales, compared with 20,000 bales for the corresponding period last season and 16,000 bales for the season before last.

Chemical Prices Continuing Steady

Although demand showed no improvement in volume or velocity, prices on heavy and fine chemicals were held steady last week, the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter will say in its August 27 issue. There were weak spots in the markets, but there was also some strengthening here and there, and the few small price changes were on the upward side.

The slightly higher prices named during the week applied to bisulphite of soda, the CP grades of the mineral acids, imported tartaric acid, and some of the organic fertilizer materials. Tin salts were a bit wobbly. Coaltar solvents were in slightly better position.

The Reporter's composite index number for prices of heavy and fine chemicals was unchanged, at 125.8 (compared with August 1, 1914, as 100). In comparison with average prices in 1926 (as 100), the Reporter's index number is now 89.0, against 89.3 at this time last year.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

New High for Intellectual Confusion Is Set by Mr. Harry Hopkins in Discussing the Plans for a New Relief Program.

By Ralph West Robey.

In making plans for the future it is comforting to have such an enlightened statement as that just issued by Mr. Harry Hopkins on the future of the relief problem. Mr. Hopkins, it may be recalled, is one of those members of the Administration who, during the hot Washington summer, has been chasing around the world for new "ideas." He has visited, according to the press, Germany, France, England, Austria and Italy. As a result, it is reported, he has learned that "foreign relief measures are not adaptable to the United States." He also has concluded that our present system is "uneconomic" and must be scuttled "as soon as possible." In its place we must have a plan which will provide permanent relief and security for all."

Unfortunately, it is impossible to determine from the news dispatches on the ship interview in which the plan was discussed, just what the plan is to be. Neither can one determine with complete and absolute certainty from these accounts, whether the lack of clarity is the result of confusion in the mind of Mr. Hopkins. It may be that the reporters simply failed to grasp the plan in all its beautiful ramifications. Nevertheless, a few points stand out that are worthy of attention.

Plan Covers Four Major Features of the Economy.

First of these is the scope of the plan. It is to include unemployment insurance, public works, a more economical land policy and decentralization of industry. Through these various means the millions that heretofore have been at the bottom of the social order will be given a "decent living." We wil make it possible "for a man to work." We will make it possible for people to "know what to expect" and we will give them "the sense of security that's so essential." This is all to be done, nevertheless, "in an American way." There is not to be any copying of foreign schemes. Our task is "not comparable to the homogeneous problems of other nations."

Second of the great points is the cost. According to Mr. Hopkins the plan "will cost a lot more" than the present method. In fact, we will not be able to have it "without doing away with a large percentage of the luxuries now taking up or consuming so much of our National income." What this means is that we shall have a different distribution of income. Henceforth, "far more * * * must be devoted to social security, to giving a decent living to many people who never got a break."

This Greatly Increased Cost Not to Be Felt.

This prospect of increased cost, however, need not worry us. For in the new plan no one is going to feel the burden. It will not be like the billion or so that we have poured out the last year. That piling up of debt was "purely temporary," something to do away with as quickly as possible. Under the new plan, while the cost will be vastly greater, it will not be felt by any one. If this does not seem to make sense, I can only refer to Mr. Hopkins' one statement. He says: "I don't think it will hit the wealthy; in fact, I don't think it will hit any one very hard." Certainly this means that what Mr. Hopkins has in mind is one of those delightful schemes whereby one spends billions, but no one ever has to pay the bill.

To have such assurances about the future is, as stated above, most comforting. Few nations have individuals capable of designing such plans. We all should be pleased that a man of such profundity is in charge of giving away some $3,000,000,000 of taxpayers' money.

Inflationary Rumors Cut Bond Trading

Secondary Loans Give Best Performance, Moving Up in Quiet Sales.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Appraisals of bond market movements during the past week were somewhat confusing largely owning to the erratic tendencies displayed by United States Government Securities.

A fresh crop of inflationary rumors, all of which were officially spiked by Treasury authorities, brought heavy selling into the Federal division on Wednesday and some of the Home Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage bonds dropped to record lows. There were numerous recoveries later, but the trading volume dwindled.

Some consideration of the inflation gossip, which included the further depreciation of the dollar to the extreme limit of 50 per cent of its former gold value, found most banking circles highly skeptical.

These pointed out that, no matter what the ultimate intentions of the Administration concerning monetary manipulation, currency inflation in the near future was hardly likely inasmuch as the Treasury has financing operations in September and October involving some $1,700,000,000 and a good bond market is a necessity.

Prime corporation loans did not pay as much attention to the renewal of inflationary psychology as did the governments and the majority of these were only a bit easier at their worst. In the later part of the week a number of utility issues displayed strength.

Secondary loans, led by the rails, probably gave the best performance and many of these moved substantially higher in comparatively quiet trading.

While the latest car loadings report showed a more than seasonal decline in traffic, carrier liens apparently were aided by the move for higher freight rates, steps taken to combat the recent pension law and a revival of hope that Washington will "do something" to rescue the transportation systems from their present state of uncertainty.

Amusement bonds were among the strong spots, reflecting reorganization plans of some of the companies and reports of a pickup in business.

Due to the activity in Federal list, total transfers on Wednesday amounted to $23,463,000, par value, the largest aggregate since August 9. On Monday, however, the trading volume dropped to $6,245,000, the smallest total since September 13, last year.

Interest in foreign obligations was principally centered in the South Americans. Most of the Argentines advanced to new highs for the year and substantial gains were scored by loans of Uruguay, Brazil, Colombia, Peru and Chile. German government issues were heavy.

Stocks of Lead.

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Stocks of lead in the United States at the end of July totaled 240,595 short tons, against 238,181 tons at the end of June and 171,275 tons at the end of July, 1933, according to the American Bureau of Metals Statistics. Production in July amounted to 31,881 tons, against 33,218 in June and 23,469 in July, 1933.

Curb Market Moves Upward In All Groups

Substantial Advances Are Recorded as Volume Is Broadened.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Curb market moved forward substantially last week, rebounding from approximately the low levels of 1934. Improvement was noted in virtually all groups, and volume broadened on the upturn.

The trend was uncertain at the start of the week, but on Tuesday and Wednesday the price movement turned decisively upward.

Specialties displayed particular strength, while utilities were at their best in some time. Gains were well represented among oils, metals and alcohols.

Among the sharpest gainers were Midvale, A. O. Smith, Singer Manufacturing, Aluminum Co. of America, Parker Rust Proof and Pan American Airways, all up 3 to 4 points at times.

Both Swift & Co. and Swift Internacional were active and firm throughout the week. Other shares in good demand included Hiram Walker, Newmont, Electric Bond & Share, Lake Shore, Technicolor, Humble Oil, International Petroleum, American Gas & Electric and American Cyanamid B. Pepperell Manufacturing and Gulf Oil hardened after early reactions.

Volume turned comparatively active following Monday's record low turnover of 82,000 shares. Average transfers for each full session amounted to around 150,000 shares, compared with an average of about 125,000 the week before.

London Studying Status of Brokers

Exchange Begins Survey of Britons' Position in New York.

London, Aug. 25 (AP).—A special committee of the London Stock Exchange began today an informal study of the position of British brokers dealing in New York under the United States Government's new stock market regulations.

Announcement that income tax may be levied on profits from stock exchange dealing was a matter of particular concern to the London brokers, since it was expected that Washington's next step will be to inform bankers and brokers in foreign countries that they must disclose the names of all clients for whom they have acted in Wall Street.

It was reported the committee would seek the advice of British and American legal authorities and accountancy experts in the hope of discovering some method of evading the tax, after which the committee would present its case to the British government. The British Bankers Association also is scheduled to meet to decide whether to refuse to disclose the names of clients.

Nation's Trade Moves to Push Rate of Sales

Heavy Industries Continue to Drift; Autos Hold Up in August.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—With Labor Day now close at hand, the Nation's business is making more vigorous efforts to whet the appetite of the consumer, and in this normally quiet month, the results have been encouraging.

Labor Day is usually regarded as the turning point from the vacation season to the brisker activity of autumn, and the moderate quickening in retail trade during the past week or two, aided by cooler weather and extensive promotional events, have boosted hopes for the fall season.

Thus far, however, hopes hinge chiefly on consumers goods, for heavy industry continues to drift. Steel works operations last week dropped 1 percentage point to 21.3 per cent of capacity, the lowest since right after the bank holiday in March of 1933.

Auto Trade Holds Up.

The automobile industry has held up better than expected through August, but some plants will shut down for a week or more around Labor Day, and sales of both new and used cars during the past week, according to Cram, declined rather sharply.

The past week's decline in production, however, was only 1,503 units to 52,351, which was a little above the corresponding level for last year.

The heavy lines of industry are now leaning largely on Government expenditure. The chief steel business of the past week, according to Steel, was 36,000 tons of structural and reinforcing materials, mainly for Federal and municipal projects.

Eagerness on the part of the Administration to expedite construction was seen in the letting of contracts for 24 Naval vessels within a week from the opening of the bids.

Textiles Under Shadow.

The cotton textile industry is still under the shadow of the threat of a general strike, but inventories have been substantially reduced by the curtailment of production during the summer, and higher operating schedules are planned in several lines.

The silk industry, however, has arranged to curtail to a four-day week schedule until September 28, owing to the light demand, and production of woolen fabrics remains dull. Shoe output remains well under the levels of a year ago, quickened operations are reported among food processors, however, and a few other lighter lines have picked up a little.

The weekly report of freight movement showed a slight contra-seasonal decline. The total of 600,564 cars was 0.3 per cent under the previous week and 6.7 per cent under the same week of last year. Electric output again rose more than seasonally, showing a margin of 1.5 per cent over last year, but heavier use of power for pumping in the drought areas appears to be a factor in this showing, since the total for the west central part of the country was up 12.3 per cent, compared with 1933, and for the Central industrial region only 1.1 per cent, while New England was off 7 per cent from the same week of last year.

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

BEGINNING September 1, the activities which are now performed by the Veterans Administration in connection with the Civil Service retirement act and the Panama Canal Zone retirement act will be transferred to the Civil Service Commission.

The commission will be in a position by this date to provide space for the 68 employes who will be transferred. Negotiations are now under way which look to their housing in an office building on G street between Ninth and Tenth streets northwest.

The transferred force will be attached to the commission's Service Record and Retirement Division, under general direction of its chief, L. H. Fisher.

After September 1, the commission will adjudicate all claims under the two retirement acts. The actual payment of checks will continue to be made by the Treasury, and that department will continue to have charge of the retirement funds.

In its last annual report the commission recommended enactment of legislation to allow employes to designate beneficiaries to the amount of their credit in the retirement fund, to be paid in case of death. This was asked so that heirs would avoid unnecessary expense.

The last session of Congress enacted such a law, which will become effective at the same time that the Veterans Administration workers are transferred. All employes will be informed of the proper procedure of naming beneficiaries by their department heads.

Members of the Appraisal Division of the Farm Credit Administration banqueted Friday at Vienna, Va., with fried chicken the important part of their menu. M. C. Bargaman was toastmaster. J. H. Guill, deputy land bank commissioner, was the principal speaker. A program of entertainment was led by P. L. Gaddis (*). Congratulations were offered Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Buchanan on their recent marriage.

At least 10 per cent of the membership of each lodge of the American Federation of Government Employes is expected to march in the Labor Day parade, it was learned yesterday.

Officials of each lodge have been asked to contact members and report to David R. Glass, National vice president, the number planning to march.

After two months' vacation in Europe, visiting ten countries including England, France, Italy, Germany Holland and Switzerland, Misses Marie Puhr and Corinne Watts, of 1830 K street northwest, have returned to Washington and their Federal duties.

High points of their tour were a glimpse of King George and Queen Mary in Scotland and the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Miss Puhr is with the Farm Credit Administration, and Miss Watts is employed in the Treasury Department. They returned from Naples on the liner Roma.

Wool Futures Gain in Week

Better Trade Demand Develops for Spots; Price, 84 Cents.

New York, Aug. 26.—Prices of wool top futures on the New York Wool Top Exchange registered an advance of 10 to 17 points during the past week. The market was rather quiet in the early part of the week, but toward the close trading increased considerably. There was also a much better demand from the trade for spot tops. The Spot Exchange standard certificated top was quoted at the close of trading on Friday at 84.0 cents, as against 85.0 cents a week ago.

Futures in foreign markets showed declines from the close of the previous week. At Antwerp prices were off 1⅝ to 2 pence per pound, while at Roubaix they showed a decline of 160 to 170 centimes. Bradford spot quotations were unchanged to up three-quarters of a penny from the close of the previous week.

Following is a summary of quotations on the New York Wool Top Exchange for the week ending Friday:

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Cotton goods—New England mill centers report an improved sentiment in cloths markets, which are being stimulated by heavy purchases for Government account. Some mills are said to have refused large print cloth orders on the ground that terms named by the prospective buyers were unsatisfactory.

Chemicals—Some items in the group of fine chemicals show signs of a revival, according to trade sources. Quicksilver shows strength under a good inquiry and limited supplies.

Floor covering—The trade hears that leading manufacturers of rugs are optimistic regarding the fall outlook, believing that the low stocks in the hands of mills and dealers will tend toward good buying at satisfactory prices.

Stocks Reflect Hope of Better Autumn Trade

Dealing in Shares Gains Volume; Prices Rise to 75.7 Level.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Financial markets were a little more inclined to anticipate an autumn business revival this week.

The stock market finally managed to score a fair rebound from the levels reached in the sharp reaction a month ago, and the bond market extended its recovery of the previous week, based on the quieting of inflation fears.

Commodities continued to advance in those lines most affected by drought conditions. Hogs touched $7.50 a hundredweight at Chicago, up $1 in the past week, and corn futures rose about 4 cents a bushel. Wheat was about unchanged for the week. Cotton was unsettled by the continued threat of a textile mill strike, but ended the week with net gains of 40 to 70 cents a bale at New York.

Trading in Shares.

Trading in shares quickened moderately after registering the smallest volume in the stock exchange in 12 years on Monday, and the Standard Statistics price index of 90 representative issues closed at 75.7, up 4.1 points from last Saturday. The index of 60 corporate bonds worked up 0.6 of a point to 84.5.

The attention of business and financial circles was focused upon Washington, as Administration leaders gathered to discuss problems of such moment as the future of the NRA, and Treasury officials considered its refunding problems aggregating $1,725,000,000 for Sept. 15 and Oct. 15.

A modest inflationary flurry swept through the markets in the middle of the week, coincident with rumors, later emphatically denied by Secretary Morgenthau, that the dollar might be devalued the full limit allowable and declared upon a permanent gold basis at that level.

Rails Lead Recovery.

Railroad securities experienced the best recovery in some time, despite the adverse showing of the first batch of July earnings reports.

They seemed influenced largely by gatherings of executives to discuss the problems of increased operating costs and shrunken revenues, and an editorial expression of opinion by Raymond Moley, former leading brain truster, regarding the need for remedying railroad ills.

Much attention in business quarters was attracted by the statements of two Administration spokesmen in defense of the profit motive in business, but Wall street maintained a cautious attitude toward the prospects for corporate earnings, in view of mounting costs and recent unsatisfactory experiences in trying to raise retail prices of manufactured goods.

Retail Trade Reports.

Retail trade reports, however, remained cheerful, leading to hopes of fair autumn business in consumers goods lines. Steel production, however, dipped to the lowest level since March of 1933.

Curious movements in foreign exchange, linked by some experts to the silver buying program, were marked by a drop in the pound sterling to a new low in terms of the French gold franc. The dollar went down along with the pound, and exports of more than $7,000,000 in gold from New York were arranged.

Wilhelm Voight, a shoemaker, disguised himself as an officer of the Prussian Footguards, then staged a one-man raid on Kopenick, Germany, October 26, 1906. He first took over the city hall, tricking officials with his captain's uniform and self-bestowed title. He confiscated the city treasury, arrested the mayor, or burgomaster, and the city treasurer, and sent them both to Berlin under military escort.

The hoax was not discovered until the city officers arrived in Berlin as prisoners and found that officials knew nothing about the raid on Kopenick.

Voight, a former convict, was soon arrested and brought to trial—and in less than six weeks was in prison again under sentence of four years. He was released August 16, 1908.

Kopenick is a town in the Prussian Province of Brandenburg, located on an island 10 miles southeast of Berlin. At the time of Voight's raid it had a population of about 27,000.

Business Men Push Projects In Southeast

Prepare to Organize Nine Civic Groups to Seek Improvements.

Southeast Washington—described by District officials as the most undeveloped section of the Capital—was preparing yesterday to organize at least nine civic groups behind a uniform program of development.

Richard English, president of the Southeast Business Men's Association, announced that a meeting of the organization's executive committee will be called this week to map methods of approaching District officials and Congress and stirring up public sentiment to put through a long list of improvements.

These call principally for immediate removal of the garbage transfer plant at New Jersey avenue and K streets southeast to an entirely industrial section, an immediate appropriation of $300,000 to start work on the $1,000,000 Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge across the Anacostia River, and improvement and construction of arterial highways to give the area adequate access to the rest of the city.

Mass Meeting Called.

At the same time, Vernis Abscher, chairman of the civic committee of the Southeast Citizens Association, had dispatched invitations to the heads of nine civic associations calling a mass meeting for September 5 in Buchanan Hall, Thirteenth and D streets southeast. The associations have an approximate total membership of 1,000 and are considered a representative cross-section of the area's 70,000 residents.

A round-up of all improvement proposals will be presented and an attempt made to get the backing of all organizations represented for an accepted list of projects.

Specifically, the meeting has been called to consider recommendations for improvements which were to have been submitted to Congress by the District's recently retired engineer commissioner, Maj. J. C. Gotwals, and turned over by him to English and Abscher for approval of the civic organizations.

Projects Are Listed.

These projects, in addition to the bridge appropriation and the garbage plant removal, include:

Construction of a swimming pool in Anacostia Park between Pennsylvania avenue and East Capitol street, extension of Independence avenue on the south side of the Mall to correspond to Constitution avenue on the north side, a boulevard to replace Minnesota avenue and Anacostia road from Central avenue to Pennsylvania avenue, and amendment of the assessment law to make property owners liable for costs of curb and gutter.

Certain also to come before the meeting is the proposal for widening Pennsylvania avenue from Eleventh street to the bridge to conform with the roadway running from Eleventh street to the Capitol. An earlier proposal calling for removal of trees lining the car tracks in the center of the street, opposed by a large group of citizens associations and favored by some business interests, is expected to be dropped to avoid controversy.

Widening of Eleventh street from Anacostia bridge to Pennsylvania avenue, and construction of comfort stations in the area are among other projects proposed, but the latter, at least, is expected to be dropped temporarily until money for more needed improvements is appropriated.

Urges Garbage Plant Removal.

The business association, English said, will insist upon removal of the garbage plant at once with street improvements and construction of the Pennsylvania avenue bridge to follow as soon as possible.

He said he hoped to get the executive committee, consisting of himself, Clarence O'Donohue, Alexander Berlin, John Holland and Charles Jenkins, together tomorrow.

The business association has appropriated $1,500 to carry on an advertising campaign to stir up public sentiment for its projects.

Man's Foot Shot in Row In Glen Echo Heights

Benjamin Katz, 38, of Glen Echo Heights, Md., was brought to Georgetown Hospital yesterday for treatment of a gunshot wound in his right foot. Police said he was shot during an argument with another man near Glen Echo.

Hell's Kitchen to Get Scouring

Lair of Gopher Gang, Battle Annie, Sadie the Goat and Other Unsavory Characters Will Be Partly Wiped Out for Hudson Tunnel.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—The knife of progress stands poised to cut away a large slice of that unsavory district known as Hell's Kitchen, which produced some of the most picturseque mayhem artists in New York crime annals.

Under the domination of the Gopher gang, Hell's Kitchen became, at the turn of the century, the theater of operations for what civic reformers termed the most vicious mob of footpads and cutthroats on the American continent.

Now it is to be partly wiped out to make way for the approaches to the new midtown Hudson tunnel between New York and New Jersey. Bids will be opened Friday for the demolition of 91 old tenement houses.

The westerly two-thirds of the block bounded by West Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth streets, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, will be razed.

Potashes Were First Gang.

Previously, a good residential section, the district became known as Hell's Kitchen after the Civil War, when a gang of hoodlums calling themselves the Potashes, began terrorizing the neighborhood.

The Potashes were succeeded by the Gophers and such allied bands as the Gorillas, the Rhodes gang and the Parlor mob.

Their most fruitful source of loot, the freight cars and railroad depots in the district, ultimately became the means of their undoing. The exasperated railroads recruited squads of special policemen who clubbed the gangsters from one end of Hell's Kitchen to the other and finally broke them up.

Had Woman's Club.

In their heyday the Gophers had a women's auxiliary known as the Battel Row Ladies' Social and Athletic Club, headed by the queen of Hell's Kitchen, Battle Annie.

Police recall another vixen known as Sadie the Goat, who, on encountering a prosperous-looking subject, would lower her head and butt him in the stomach. Her male accomplice thereupon would slug the surprised victim insensible and together they would rob him at leisure.

One of the last Gopher chieftains was "Owney" Madden, who still bobs up in the news occasionally. But the district itself is so peaceful now that policemen no longer have to patrol three and four abreast.

District Heads Plan Slum War In Parley Today

Must Find Other Method Than Condemnation of Dwellings.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will meet a group of other District officials today and endeavor to map out a course of action to improve housing conditions in the city's slums.

The conference, which is to be held in Hazen's office this morning, was summoned after a survey revealed what was called a shocking situation in certain sections of the city.

This survey, made by the emergency relief division of the Board of Public Welfare, showed that houses were overcrowded, poorly ventilated, and in many ways insanitary.

If the local government had its way, it would condemn many of these dwellings. However, under a court decision in 1926, the city must pay damages to the owner of a house to be demolished, and rather than do this, condemnation has been abandoned.

Hence, Commissioner Hazen and those who confer with him this morning must find other means of striking at landlords who are responsible for insanitary conditions..

Among those summoned are Dr. William C. Fowler, health officer; Elwood Street, director of public welfare; Leroy Halbert, director of research for the emergency relief division; Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector; Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection; John B. Gordon, director of sanitary engineering, and Robert E. Lynch, acting corporation counsel.

Mr. Lynch is engaged in drafting a proposed new condemnation law with "teeth" in it which will be presented to the next Congress.

Mall May Displace Old 'Market Place'

Board of Trade Urges Street Be Razed.

"Market Place," the famed street that paralleled the old Center Market between Seventh and Eighth, near Pennsylvania avenue, may soon go the way of many landmarks displayed by the ambitious Mall building program.

If a suggestion forwarded to the District Commissioners in an open letter from the National Board of Trade, is approved, the street will henceforth bear the far more aristocratic title of "Archives Place." Fred A. Berlin, secretary of the board, yesterday asserted that erection of the Archives Building on the site formerly occupied by the market, prompted the change.

Mexican Polo Players To Call Upon Woodring

Members of the Mexican army polo team, who arrived here Friday, headed by Brig. Gen. Gilbert R. Limon, will make an official call on Acting Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring at 11 a. m. today, following which they will pay their respects to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff.

The five players will be accompanied by Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate, Mexican Military Attache.

$500 Week-End Loot of Thugs In Washington

Holdups, Robberies and Housebreakings Listed in Various Sections.

Loot of more than $500 was obtained in a series of week-end holdups, robberies and housebreakings, police reported yesterday.

Four persons said they were robbed at gunpoint on streets throughout the city. Joseph Costa, 738 Fourteenth street northwest, told police he was robbed of $200 by two men near California street and Phelps place northwest. Both carried guns and were masked. They escaped in an automobile.

Joseph W. Williams, 43, of 121 Sixty-seventh street northeast, a taxi driver, said a colored man he picked up at Eleventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest robbed him of $8.

Another Taxi driver, Hebert Todd, 47, of 509 Longfellow street northwest, reported a colored man answering the same description robbed him of $4.

Walter Miller, 215 Fourteenth place northeast, a third taxi driver, saved his money by battling a would-be bandit. His assailant escaped.

James Warton, 1233 Thirty-seventh street northwest, reported that while asleep early yesterday he was robbed of $120. He was visiting at a house near Sixth and N streets northwest, he said.

Surgical instruments valued at $150 were stolen from the parked automobile of Dr. George L. Bell, 25 New York avenue northwest.

Intruders who forced entrance to the home of Joseph C. Monaghan, 158 Uhland terrace northwest, escaped with clothing and jewelry valued at $70.

Quake Rocks Area 2,500 Miles Away

Tremor Located Off North Pacific Coast of U. S.

An earthquake of "slight to moderate" intensity, probably about 2,500 miles west of Washington, was reported yesterday by the Georgetown University.

The seismograph at the university showed the earthquake began at 8:37 p. m. Saturday night, reached maximum intensity at 8.48 and ended at 9:16. Father Frederick W. Sohon, S. J., director of the Astronomical Laboratory, asserted that readings placed the geographic disturbance off the Pacific Coast between Seattle and San Francisco.

Young Democrats To Hear Idahoan

Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), Idaho, will be the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the District division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in the Willard Hotel.

The Senator, who claims the distinction of being the only Idaho Democrat to openly attack his colleague, Senator Borah, and to hold the all-time record for speedy law-making, will discuss Government efficiency.

Pope is serving his first term in the Senate.

China Trains Athletes With Eyes on Berlin

Nanking (U.P.).—Undaunted by the failure of her one-man team to score a single point at the Los Angeles Olympics, China is making plans for a stronger representation in Berlin in 1936.

China has concentrated her competitive athletic attendance upon the Far Eastern Olympics. Chinese youths acquitted themselves well at the Far Eastern games held at Manila earlier this year, but her official representative, former Foreign Secretary C. T. Wang, found it necessary to withdraw from the Far Eastern Athletic Association after Japan had forced the issue of Olympic membership for Manchukuo.

Preparations for Chinese participation in the next Olympics are in the hands of the National Amateur Athletic Federation. The number of contestants to be sent to Berlin, according to a director of the N. A. A. F., will depend on the standard of competition achieved during the next year and a half, and especially on the showings made at the second national athletic meet to be held at Shanghai in October, 1935.

In any event, China will have entries at Berlin for field and track competition, in both the male and female divisions.

The success of the first national athletic games held at Nanking in October, 1933, was so gratifying that the National Federation, encouraged by the National Government, has decided to make the games a biennial fixture.

Walt Mason, Himself

Terrible Times.

I read the papers in the morning, I read the papers in the eve, in every one I find a warning, and something over which to grieve. Our industries collapse or languish, our trade is shrinking day by day; I rend my whiskers in my anguish, and push my head outdoors and bray. The world was never up against it in such a shape as it is now, though in the past misfortunes fenced it, and creased the thoughtful human brow. There's nothing peaceful, sane or quiet, in any corner of the globe; with hints of war and threats of riot, well may the voter rend his robe. Some cities swarm with noisy strikers who lately clamored for a job, imported Red and other pikers have formed a most impressive mob. I read each day the newsy papers and wonder what will be the end of all these strange, revolting capers, in which sound sense can find no friend. I said last night, "I'm tired of reading these tales of violence and gore, of garments torn and faces bleeding, and I won't read them any more. I have some files of ancient papers, some sheets of 40 years ago, and by the kindly light of tapers I'll give that old-time stuff a throw. The dove of peace was then cavorting serenely over all the land, and people were not ranting, snorting, with club or blunderbuss in hand." I dug up then the yellowed journal I used to read in bygone days, and found it full of news infernal of riots, scraps and kindred plays. The editor was sternly viewing the future prospects with alarm, for it was plain that war was brewing, and there was ruin on the farm.

Drought Forces AAA to Revise Farm Program

Officials Now Face Task of Adjusting Normal Wheat Supply.

By Robert C. Albright.

Swept two to three years ahead of their own program by unforseen drought, Agricultural Adjustment Administration experts are doing some rapid figuring these days to bring their plans and hopes for controlled and stable farm output up to date.

Relieved overnight of their wheat surplus dilemma by a blight that played into their crop reduction scheme, AAA officials yesterday were at grips for the first time with the problem of adjusting a nearly normal wheat supply to nearly normal demands.

It is the opportunity AAA New Dealers have been waiting for ever since Secretary Wallace began his farm experiment, but never expected to arise until two or three years hence. This is the time the AAA figured the towering wheat surplus might be eliminated by artificial crop reduction methods.

Plan to Hold Surplus Down.

Having cut down the surplus to within sight of a minimum carryover, all Federal farm forces are now being concentrated on keeping it under control. The 10 per cent cut under basic production announced last week, and optimistic statements from the AAA on future international cooperation, are all being shaped to this end.

In this connection, "the ever-normal granary" idea, through which the AAA planners hope to avert the ill effect of future surpluses, using wheat stored on the farms against loans as a safety valve alike against bumper or drought crops, is being agitated again.

The corn loan program, which provided a similar set-up of corn sealed on the farms, corn that might be redeemed at any time by the farmer when curtailed corn production forced its use, has offered a practical experiment in the "ever-normal granary" idea.

Wheat Plan Held Proved.

Off the record, AAA officials will say that the corn storage experiment has proved the wisdom of the broader wheat control proposal, despite the fact that it was designed for an entirely different emergency purpose.

Again, as in the case of the drought, blundering nature found its way into the AAA control picture and offered a solution, experts say.

Reduction of the tremendous domestic wheat surplus, possible only on a slight scale under any man-made plan, has been possible at a phenomenal rate in the last two drought years, leaving officials concerned with maintaining an ample margin rather than with the old problem of surplus curtailment.

Last year a total domestic supply of 921,000,000 bushels of wheat was available for disposal. But on July 1 last, carryover from last year's 500,000,000 bushel crop had been cut to 290,000,000 bushels, nearly 100,000,000 lower than 1932. The 1934 drought cut this year's crop production to 491,000,000 bushels, giving a total current supply of 781,000,000 bushels.

Normal Carryover Seen.

And about that, the AAA had this to say yesterday:

"Should more wheat be used for feed than ordinary as a result of the reduced supply of feed grains, carryover of wheat by the end of the current season will be reduced to normal or even lower, even if no exports should be made."

That may be one of the reasons United States officialdom was not as concerned as it might have been when the London wheat conference adjourned last week without reaching agreement on international wheat export quotas.

Foreign wheat markets, however, offer an outlet the AAA can not afford to overlook in any production-control program, and Secretary Wallace still holds out "substantial hope" for international agreement in months to come.

Next year's crop may soar above the 775,000,000 bushels the AAA is planning for, and if it does, the price-depressing wheat-surplus problem will be to the fore again. And Secretary Wallace is not overlooking any obvious bets.

Quintuplets Thriving, Only One Shows Loss

Callander, Ont., Aug. 26 (AP).—Dr. Fred Routley, Toronto Red Cross executive, expressed admiration for the progress of the Dionne quintuplets today. He accompanied Dr. A. R. Dafoe, physician in charge of the famous five, on his morning rounds.

Annette, second largest of the sisters, was the only one to show a loss, all the others showing gains of an ounce or more. Dr. Dafoe said they were all well.

Winchester Man Found Dead in Bed

Winchester, Va., Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Donald N. Nixdorf, 30, died suddenly tonight in a cottage adjoining the home of his father-in-law, E. C. Stuart.

He was found dead in bed by a friend shortly after he had retired. Authorities attributed his death to heart disease.

Nixdorf, salesman for a rubber company and well known in Winchester, leaves his wife, Dorothy, and a daughter, Susan.

Debutante Weds Actor, "Blessed" by Parents

Hollywood, Aug. 26 (AP).—Onslow Stevens, stage and screen actor, and Miss Phyllis Cooper, Society debutante and prominent in amateur theatricals, were married today in Yuma, Ariz., they advised the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Cooper.

"It was an elopement," said Mrs. Cooper, "but they most certainly have our blessing."

'Germless' Antarctica Invaded By Colds; Byrd Gains Slowly

Explorer at Advance Weather Base, Waits Glimpse of Sun.

Little America, Antarctica, Aug. 25 (delayed) (AP) (via Mackay Radio).—Dr. Thomas C. Poulter reported today that Admiral Richard E. Byrd was making slow daily progress toward complete recovery of his health, impaired by illness during his four months of isolation at Bolling Advance Weather Base.

When Dr. Poulter's tractor party reached the advance base a fortnight ago, Admiral Byrd, having been without conversation so long, did all his talking in shouts. But recently, Dr. Poulter said, he has unconsciously readjusted his voice to its normal softness.

The last two days at the advance base have brought daily minimum temperatures of 75 degrees below zero, the party reported by radio, and they have not yet seen the sun, which for five days has been showing its rim above the Ross Sea after the long winter night.

From Little America the sun looked today at noon like a pillar of gold in a sea of rose. The temperature was 54 below, having risen from a minimum of 65 below yesterday.

There is a possibility that an airplane flight will be made to the advance base in the near future. Admiral Byrd intends to continue the base as an inland meteorological station and new observers will take over the base when he leaves.

An outbreak of colds has attacked the party at Little America. Colds are uncommon in this supposedly germless continent, and everyone was at a loss to account for the infection. Dr. Louis H. Potaka, medical officer, finally figured it out that the germs were probably spread when a box of clothes was opened in one of the buildings. The epidemic was not serious.

Writer Scores Brain Trusters On Food Policy

Trade Expert Says Nation Needs More Consumption of Cotton, Wool, Food.

"Underconsumption rather than overproduction is the underlying cause of our present economic ills," in the opinion of Fred A. Berlin, secretary of the National Board of Trade.

The "college professors," Mr. Berlin believes, are advocating destruction of food when many are starving, and cotton and wool, when many are in need of clothes. "Statistics show," he says, "that there is no limit to the consuming power of the American people, when they have money or credit."

Mr. Berlin's views were expressed in a letter to The Post in regard to a series of articles on local housing conditions.

Capital Well Off.

"Deplorable as conditions may seem," says Mr. Berlin, "Washington is far better off than most cities of the country. A recent inspection trip to Philadelphia, New York, Toledo, Detroit and Chicago observing housing and living conditions disclosed this fact.

"The real point at issue is that our "Brain Trust" insists that overproduction is the cause of our present evils, and we must plow under cotton and reduce food, and food animals, such as hogs, to fertilizer, &c., when underconsumption is the real fault.

"The alarming spread of tuberculosis in the District of Columbia, as well as other places, is due largely to malnutrition; and the unsanitary conditions which you so ably describe in your series of articles bring on many other human ailments, which cost society far more than it would to correct the housing evils.

"There can be no overproduction of cotton as long as at least 25 per cent of our 30,000,000 American homes are without sheets and other linens, or lacking in sufficient numbers of mattresses and much needed wearing apparel."

In conclusion, Mr. Berlin states, "It would appear that the Administration has the cart before the horse, working on the false assumption of overproduction instead of underconsumption."

'Nursemaid' Happy As Cobras Join Zoo

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (Spl.).—Latest additions to the Snake Zoo of Gordon Gaver, of Thurmont, Md., are two king cobras, deadly Indian serpents, which arrived in Baltimore aboard the Baltimore Mail Line steamer City of Hamburg yesterday.

During the 3,000-mile voyage the snakes were kept in a large ventilated box, and were cared for by Second Officer Ivan Moon, who expressed himself as highly relieved when Mr. Gaver arrived to take the snakes off his hands.

Mr. Gaver plans to put the snakes on exhibition at his farm near Thurmont.

Herndon Man Killed by Dive

Dr. Ralph V. Chamblin Hits Rock in River Near Accomac.

Dr. Ralph V. Chamblin, 43, prominent druggist of Herndon, Va., was instantly killed yesterday while swimming near Accomac, Va. According to reports reaching Herndon last night, Dr. Chamblin dived from the river bank, his head striking a rock. When pulled from the water a few minutes later he was dead.

Dr. Chamblin went to Accomac Saturday evening, where his wife had been visiting relatives for several days. They were to return to Herndon last night. He had been the owner of the Herndon Drug Store for the past 15 years, and took an active part in all civic and social affairs of the town and the northern section of Fairfax County.

He is survived by his widow and three children, Ralph, jr., Anne and James, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Chamblin, of Chantilly, and a sister, Mrs. Asa Bradshaw, of Herndon.

Farmer Shoots Golf Caddy.

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—James McClemmon, 17, a caddy, climbed over a fence from a course today to retrieve a ball, a shotgun roared and he fell, wounded in the leg. Police arrested Frank Davidson, a farmer, accused of firing at the youth for trampling on his field.

Campaign for Lotteries to Fill Shrunken U. S. Coffers Revived

Plans for Unemployment Relief Offered in Several States.

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Agitation for the once outlawed lottery to bolster depression-depleted State and some municipal treasuries has bobbed up in several parts of the country.

Profits from the proposed lotteries, banned as illegal on the grounds they drained dry the pockets of the poor, who were attracted by the lucrative prizes, mainly would be used for unemployment relief, a survey today showed.

In New York a series of lotteries designed to raise $12,000,000 net annually has been suggested by Mayor LaGuardia's committee on taxes for financing unemployment relief. While the movement already has been attacked in several quarters as illegal, sponsors contend the State Legislature's enabling act would make the lottery legitimate.

Under the plan, buyers of tickets would become stockholders in special corporations whose officers would be selected by lot. A fourth to a third of the total revenue would be used to pay officers' salaries. Their duties practically would be nil.

A bill for the State-wide lottery has been prepared for the next session of the Maryland Legislature by Lester Muller, president of the Baltimore City council, with the objective to raise relief funds in the event of Government curtailment.

Proponents of a littery also have been active in Louisiana, where the most famous of American lotteries once flourished.

In Maine a bill to establish a State lottery was killed in the last Legislative session. A similar bill was introduced in the Ohio Legislature but was not acted upon.

Silk Code Head Cancels Order, Assailing NRA

"Unfair Discrimination" Prompts Plan to End Curtailed Output.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—As a result of what it termed "unfair discrimination" by the NRA at Washington, changing market conditions and other developments, the silk code authority tonight announced suspension of its production curtailment order.

Under the order, issued August 18, all producers of silk, rayon and other synthetic textiles operating under the code were to close down for six successive Fridays beginning with August 24 and including September 28. In addition they were to limit production on other days during that period to a maximum of 80 per cent of the hours per week permitted by the code.

At the request of a Paterson, N. J., attorney and "without consulting the code authority," said Peter Van Horn, chairman of the code authority, Washington authorities last Thursday granted a special temporary exemption from the curtailment to approximately 17 concerns, representing about 40 mills situated principally in Paterson.

"The members of the code authority," he said, "strongly resented the effect of the policy of the NRA Administration in Washington on the large number of mills who, either having the best interests of the industry as a whole at heart, and having full knowledge of the serious overproduction problem, had not applied to the code authority for exemption, or had, upon rejection of their exemption in a splendid spirit of cooperation, made no effort to go over the head of the code authority and make an appeal to the Administrator in Washington."

While he was "well aware of the strain under which the deputy administrator in Washington was working," he said, "and was most sympathetic owing to the fact that he is new to his position and does not have a background of practical textile experience, yet the members of the Code Authority could not understand why action had been taken by Washington without first obtaining the facts from the Code Authority."

Mr. Van Horn said he was advised in a telephone conversation with Washington yesterday that a hearing called by the deputy administrator on the question of exemption for the Patterson firms scheduled for next Wednesday would be canceled.

He also said that the Washington administration had agreed with his suggestion that "to offset the unfairness brought about through the granting of exemptions to a few mills located principally in Patterson, N. J., that all those who were in direct competition with those mills and had closed as ordered on Friday, August 24, could, upon application to the Code Authority, and the approval of the administrator in Washington, receive permission to work an extra day within the period of the next two weeks."

Miss Pickford to Act As Air Derby Starter

Los Angeles, Aug. 26 (AP).—Mary Pickford accepted today an invitation to serve as honorary starter of the fourth annual Transcontinental Speed Classic to start from the Union Air Terminal, Burbank,, at dawn Saturday.

Miss Pickford will give the starting signal to at least half a dozen pilots, who will speed toward the National air races at Cleveland in pursuit of a $7,500 purse and the coveted Bendix Trophy.

Prison Regains Calm After Destructive Riot

Collegeville, Pa., Aug. 26 (AP).—Battle-scarred Graterford Prison, scene of convict rioting which resulted in $40,000 damage, resumed much of its normal calm today while most of the troublemakers were kept under close guard in a barb-wire pen.

Part of the prison population in a riot yesterday burned a storage barn and two garage buildings, damaged three cell blocks, and wrecked the prison kitchen, butcher shop, laundry, bake shop, workshop and warden's office.

Gov. Kump to Dedicate Plaque Upon 'Lee Tree'

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—Gov. Herman G. Kump will dedicate a bronze plaque upon the "Lee tree," an ancient sugar maple on Sewell Mountain, tomorrow at the start of the third annual week's celebration honoring Gen. Robert E. Lee.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy will unveil a bust of Gen. Lee.

Labor Demands Union Section Remain in NRA

Green Makes Policy Clear as Permanent Rules Are Discussed.

(Associated Press.)

Labor is determined that the right to bargain collectively shall be retained in the permanent NRA legislation now being drafted.

This was asserted yesterday by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, at the same time that conferences were proceeding within the Administration on which parts of the recovery act should be written on the statute books for a long time to come.

Fear of domination by employers was expressed by Green if the labor guarantee was scrapped. He said:

"We regard section 7 (a) as the most important part of the recovery act. We shall direct our efforts toward retaining section 7 (a) in any permanent legislation. Without that, labor would be at a great disadvantage. It would be subject to the domination by better organized employers' organizations, as represented by the code authorities.

Hyde Park Parley Planned.

"The National recovery act will mean little to labor without section 7 (a), which gives labor the right to bargain collectively."

President Roosevelt will propose permanent legislation to the next Congress. His aids now are shaping the program which is certain to include a continued prohibition against child labor, the fixing of maximum hours of work and bans against unfair trade practices.

Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, and Donald R. Richberg, director of the National Emergency Council and the executive council, will go to Hyde Park, N. Y., two weeks hence for final conferences on the interim organization to administer NRA until the permanent law is enacted.

It is likely that about September 10 the President will be ready to announce formation of a five-man board to run the Blue Eagle affairs, probably with Johnson as chairman.

Johnson Expected to Stay.

Indications that Johnson would remain with NRA for some time to come were strengthened today. Associates said that without doubt the recovery administrator would stay to pilot the new legislation through Congressional storms expected next winter.

That labor has advanced under NRA is agreed in all quarters. For the first time the workers' right to organize and bargain with their employers has a flat and direct guarantee in the law. As a result, more than 2,000,000 new members have been taken into the American Federation of Labor and hundreds of thousands of others have organized independently or into company unions.

It is these advances that Green is determined to preserve.

He was instrumental in obtaining for labor a "supreme court" to enforce the collective bargaining provisions. That court is known as the National Labor Relations Board, which only last week implied in a decision that Johnson himself had violated section 7(a) by discharging from NRA the president of a Federal employes' union.

Another effort by Green is directed toward shortening maximum hours of work so as to employ thousands of men now idle. A notable gain was scored last week when by Executive order the cotton garment industry's work hours were reduced from 40 to 36, with a 10 per cent increase in wages.

3,000 at Session of Twins.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 26 (U.P.).—More than 3,000 persons attended the fourth annual convention of the Twins Association. Youngest twins were Ronald and Roland Van Camp, of Mishawaka, five-weeks old.

Orr Deplores Untidy Shore At Georgetown

Arlington County Body Urged to Seek Beautification.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

If the Virginia shore of the Potomac River between Key Bridge and Alexandria in Arlington County is to be beautified by the Federal Government it would be inappropriate to permit present condition on the Georgetown shore to continue, according to the statement of Arthur Orr, president of the Arlington County Civic Federation.

Orr announced yesterday that he plans to inaugurate a move through the federation for the improvement of the Georgetown shore. The question will be placed before the Federation at its September meeting and Orr hopes it will be referred to the committee for immediate action.

The shore, he points out, is an "unsightly collection of industrial plants of a varied assortment and not in keeping with the plans for the beautification of the Arlington County shore."

In his statements Orr says that while the actual cost of the parkway when completed will have been paid by the Federal Government it has nevertheless entailed a financial sacrifice which can not be calculated by Arlington County, which surrenders for all time to come the vast potentialities of tax paying industrial development along the waterfront.

Ebenezer Association Reelects Its Officers

Luray, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—The Ebenezer Association, in session here, yesterday reelected its officers for another year and then heard four sermons. Next year's meeting will take place at Hawksbill Church, 3 miles south of Luray, the convention decided.

Elder J. B. Jenkins, of Stanley, was reelected moderator and O. F. Carpenter, Madison, and Grover Miller, Luray, renamed clerk and associate clerk respectively.

'Back-to-Work' Striker Is Assaulted, Arm Hurt

Messena, N. Y., Aug. 26 (AP).—Albert O'Ryan, vice president of the "back to work" movement recently started among striking employes of the Aluminum Co. of America, today carried his left arm in a sling as a result of an assault by men he said were union leaders.

Veteran Forester Quits To Speed Promotions

Denver, Colo., Aug. 26 (AP).—Verner W. Campbell, of Denver, a Federal forest official, quit his job and gave up a chance for a full pension today so that younger men below him in the United States Forest Service ranks could received promotion.

Campbell, 62, was deputy region fiscal agent in the forest service office in Denver and wouldn't have to retire until he is 70. By retiring now he will draw only part of the pension the Government bestows on those who arrive at the age limit of service.
